This could describe any tuition hike at any university from the past 30 years, only replace "PPE" with "whatever the PR firm told us is the acceptable excuse this year."

And of course, with a captive market of undergrads who can't leave without finishing their degree...

The numbers are clear, 3X tech moved to Austin vs Miami this last year on the LinkedIn data.

Austin is a real tech scene & lots of multi billionaire tech founders have moved here and are building. We just don't feel the need to make it a competition - that's more Miami energy

No contest that EcoHealth received a grant from NIH, or that $600k of that went to WIV. But the work described in that grant application doesn't come anywhere near gain-of-function (reporter.nih.gov/search/bvPCvB...), and that's reflected in the academic publications from that grant

When do voters finally reject Krasner types? This video -- a dozen Philly PD cruisers smashed/burned right in front of 40 cops -- is closest I've seen to complete societal breakdown in USA. Question for @aaron_renn too...can Philly 180 from shit like this?

Clear from these threads that some (many?) of Our Lead ng Pub ic nte ectua s simply have no idea what "natura aw" refers to. Th s isn't an ssue about the classical law, or Thomism, or even the Enlightenment. It's that they are utterly cut off from anyth ng before maybe 1970

The irony is that their global "human rights" regime is rooted originally in natural law jurisprudence. It's arguably a corruption of natural law, but things like the Universal Declaration and other liberal documents wouldn't exist at all without the tradition of natural law.

I wish it were just Blackrock consolidation, China buying Texas, et al.

Don't forget that inflation applies to real estate prices as well, and the little nest-egg you had hoped to use as a down payment will plummet in real purchasing power.

J. @PresentWitness
The real estate 'bubble' is Americans realizing en masse that if they don't buy a house now, they may never be able to as institutional money from Blackrock and other foreign investment floods the single family home market and prices them out permanently

nteresting observation

> Borodi sky (2009a) speaks about the impact of language on how one is oriented in the world and the resultant behavior
> > Instead of words like "right," "left," "forward," and "back," which, as commonly used in English, define space relative to an observer, the Kuuk Thaayorre, like many other Aboriginal groups, use cardinal-direction terms — north, south, east, and west — to define space. This is done at all scales, which means you have to say things like "There's an ant on your southeast leg" or "Move the cup to the north northwest a little bit." (p. 120)
> > The result is a profound difference in navigational ability and spatial knowledge between speakers of languages that rely primarily on absolute reference frames (like Kuuk Thaayorre) and languages that rely on relative reference frames (like English). Simply put, speakers of languages like Kuuk Thaayorre are much better than English speakers at staying oriented and keeping track of where they are, even in unfamiliar landscapes or inside unfamiliar buildings. What enables them — in fact, forces them — to do this is their language. Having their attention [the way the world occurs for them] trained in this way equips them to perform navigational feats once thought beyond human capabilities. (p. 121)[72]

Great article! So many commentators say "housing crisis" to mean "why can't I afford rent downtown?" But @ad_mastro is raising alarm about a national crisis--tied up with our other national crises of corporate exploitation, urban decline, and attacks on small business.

The blue check is the modern day Mark of Cain blame and punish for the explosion of their beautiful dream

But they're also just very simple and provincial. They can't think

1 6 35

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 58m
So while it's true that they love control and punishment - this is why Foucault is their most cited scholar, they're constantly explaining themselves to themselves, much as they invented "gas lighting" to explain the process of what they do to normal people -

1 1 26

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 5m
The leftist process must be understood not as stemming from immediate control and punishment, but as

Utopian ideal >

Failure >

Insecurity >

Intense rage >

Displacement of that failure onto "counter revolutionaries," whoever that might be in the current time and place

2 8 38

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 16m
So when a "policy-driven Acela liberal" like @mattyglesias says he wants to hold us all down and vaccinate us (which he's since deleted), it's not because his policies are working. It's because they are failing

He has the best intentions

But when he fails, he then hates you

2 2 8

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS Follow
@17cShyteposter

That's why it's critical to understand the leftist process not as one of inherent malevolence, but as a lashing-out when it's failing.

Once it starts to lash out, that's how you know—whatever the "data, stats," whatever—that it's not working how the utopians thought it would.

It will always reach this state, of course, by the nature of its provincial utopianism

But the lashing-out response is how you know it's failed, and that they're about to start lying to you, and blaming you for its own failure, and it's time to start reacting accordingly through the intercession of the Virgin Mary.[1 2][2] So serious was Kolbe about this goal that he added to the Miraculous Medal prayer:

Is this the correct way to phrase the miraculous medal prayer?

> O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee. And for all those who do not have recourse to thee; especially the Freemasons and all those recommended to thee.[13]

Connor @mementofines
Which questions?

21 4 86

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so you can always pass the onus over to something else for any one condition but if God actually made the universe from nothing then none of those conditions had to be the way that they are, they all could have been tweaked, so theres nothing outside to appeal to.

3 52

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so if you zoom in on any one thing within a small frame u can say, well actually this was caused by X or Y or this guy is Z or that things W but if you keep zooming out, if God made the world from nothing all those conditions ultimately go back to him + could have been changed

4 45

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
because it puts u in a very difficult situation where all genocide, guys getting stabbed, baby w some weird disease, it all could have not been like that, but ultimately for some reason God made it that way it basically makes God the author of evil, which we're told is impossible

Connor @mementofines
Yes...? I thought that was implied with God's simultaneous coexistence with every moment in time. What's the conundrum here?

4 46

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
I had an explanation worked out for this where I could just appeal to, for example, free will guy murders a kid, well he has free will, so, God didnt do it. but if you take the mans nature and all of the factors that led him to do that if ur working existing to God set all that

11 46

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so its just a tentative explanation that feels like it falls apart off screen, if God set ALL the starting conditions for the universe + made everything from scratch he could have set it up so that things like that or specific things could have not happened but that isnt the case

You can sense a tension w/r/t the varying forms of European fascism in the background of this definition. To the extent they claim to be based on mythology, what's important for Strauss is how genuine that claim is.

Let's push to ban assault rifles in the US - but pay your taxes so we can buy 358,530 assault rifles for known terrorists and also 64,363 machine guns and some attack helicopters and this other gear, too.

Also, there is no need to secure our borders.

Got it.

The SCOPA is the court of last resort for questions related to the state constitution.

So I'm not sure what the point of this is.

> Wolf's administration then asked the state's elected Supreme Court, which is 5-2 Democratic-majority and has become notorious for partisan rulings, to grant all the Democrats' requests—and they did on Sep. 17. The court went further than expected, granting the Democrats' deadline extension, approving drop boxes and satellite "election offices" for ballot collection, and even ruling that postmarks could not be used to verify when ballots had been mailed.

For Gen Z, by contrast, 9/11 is the fundamenta event at the root of their experience of modern America Mass surve l ance and mi itarized law enforcement, a nation in "managed decl ne," parents afraid to let their children ride bikes around the neighborhood.,

For many Americans, ideas are just a veneer for tribal animosity and resentment that has been fomenting for decades because of failed policies from the 60s, 70s, 80s. Visceral animosity along lines like rural vs. urban, old vs. young. Even if minds could be changed, hearts? Hm.

our group, or some of our men were in sympathy with them. And I thought, "My God, why am I doing this?" Clearly it was useless, absolutely useless if the men were beginning to feel that way. I realized then that Russia would have to go through a blood bath, for her people no longer realized what liberty meant and they did not understand. It could only be after terrific pain and hardship that they would be able to comprehend that the Bolshevik government was not the government they wanted. In the meantime, it was useless to fight for them. And I decided to try to get the family out of the Crimea and out of Russia.

It was about this time that we learned that the Czar had been taken to Siberia. Many of the men wanted to fight things out and go to rescue him.

The Siberian officer had by now recovered, and led a raiding party,

Don't you know? Big tech bankrolls Blake
As long as big tech butters Blake's bread, he will roll over and do as sugar daddy Peter Thiel says.
However, he will spout a lot of Trumpist nonsense, but his primary task is to cut taxes and deregulate big tech

"We have a new type of rule now. Not one-man rule, or rule of aristocracy or plutocracy, but of small groups elevated to positions of absolute power by random pressures and subject to political and economic factors that leave little room for decision.

They are representatives of abstract forces who have reached power through surrender of self. The iron-willed dictator is a thing of past.

There will be no more Stalins, no more Hitlers.

The rulers of this most insecure of all worlds are rulers by accident. Inept, frightened pilots at the controls of a vast machine they cannot understand, calling in experts to tell them which buttons to push."

"That murder was, like, two weeks ago, man."

The CEO of Nike praised top executive Larry Miller for admitting in a Wednesday interview that he murdered a teenager in 1985.

Miller's "story is an example of the resilience, perseverance and strength of the human spirit," CEO John Donahoe wrote in a statement about his colleague. Miller, the chairman of Nike's Jordan brand, told Sports Illustrated that when he was a 16-year-old member of Philadelphia's Cedar Avenue gang, he killed 18-year-old Edward White, a presumed member of the rival 53rd and Pine gang, in retribution for the killing of a friend.

"Miller did not know the victim, or whether he had anything to do with the stabbing of his friend, or even whether he had any connection to the 53rd and Pine gang," Sports Illustrated reported.

Donahoe, who called Miller "a beloved member of the Nike family," said he hopes Miller's experience "can create a healthy discourse around criminal justice reform, by helping remove the stigma that holds people and communities back."

Americans cannot have equality in freedom, even strictly under the law, because that would require equality in capacity for responsibility. Children, for example, do not have the same freedoms as adults.

Phaedrus @PhaedrusAnimus · 47m
Andrew, would you mind expounding here. Who does children should have less freedom because of their lower 'capacity for responsibility'?

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 11m
Does there need to be other categories for the point to hold true? But there are other categories. For example, you could say people in poverty have de facto less freedom under the law, since they can't afford the same level of legal representation.

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 11m
And people of wealth have less freedom to keep the money they earn due to progressive taxation. Physically impaired people have less freedom of movement, and mentally impaired people have less freedom of speech.

People are different and are accorded different opportunities, yes, even by law. This has been sometimes more, sometimes less true at many points throughout American history.

"Equality of opportunity under the law" as a narrow definition of equality is a cop-out in the difficult debate over rights and responsibilities.

I agree with the conclusion but not with how Mitchell arrives at it. The reason it's wrong to lower standards is not because "everyone has equality of opportunity, so it's all fair."

It's because lower standards = 3rd world USA. Fin. QED. It's the outcomes I'm focused on.

My second quest on is how far back does the unbroken chain of Anno Domini dates go?

We certainly have orig nal documents dated to each year from the present to 1,500 AD. We just as certa n y don't have such a chain back to 0 AD

But when does it break?

Empty America @T erra Y C e o 1h
suspect that the answer to both of these is going to be shockingly late, around 1,000AD or ater

Keep in m nd, we are ta k ng original manuscripts. Meaning a p ece of vellum or whatever created n 600AD, dated 600AD

Not a copy from 1,200 that says "600 AD."

how indeed

(3) How do you explain these odd little everyday phenomena with which everyone is familiar:

You have seen yourself a thousand times in the mirror, face to face. No sight is more familiar. Yet why is it that the first time you see yourself in a clothier's triple mirror—from the side, so to speak—it comes as a shock? Or the first time you saw yourself in a home movie: were you embarrassed? What about the first time you heard your recorded voice—did you recognize it? Clearly, you should, since you've been hearing it all your life.

Why is it that, when you are shown a group photograph in which you are present, you always (and probably covertly) seek yourself out? To see what you look like? Don't you know what you look like?

Has this ever happened to you? You are walking along a street of stores. There are other people walking. You catch a glimpse in a store window of a reflection of a person. For a second or so you do not recognize the person. He, she, seems a total stranger. Then you realize it is your own reflection. Then in a kind of transformation, the reflection does in fact become your familiar self

It's becoming increasingly clear that the traditional 19th-c. justice system, particularly the concept of jury trial, cannot survive the mass-media digital age. Our courts make too many naive assumptions about unbiased observers, knowledge, behavior, and even "fairness" & equity.

Paul's letter to the Ephesians chapter 5 says to be "imitators" of Christ and provides a long list of actions that entails.

You can try to use the gospels as a kind of philosophical biography -- Muslims do this with the Hadith -- but the rest of the New Testament is essential.

What's really funny about this view is that even though it separates Thomas from Pelagius, it raises many more questions...

Does "act" imply a motive force (a se) in the intellect

After the will's command, can the intellect do otherwise than to assent

People say Twitter's explicit embrace of "publisher" TOS is cause to revoke Section 230.

I couldn't agree more, in principle.

But it's jarring to encounter people who still believe Big Tech is subject to U.S. law.

Did you get that from a 90s talk show or something?

A people cannot likely live for long as citizens in one country when they disagree on what human life is (and, therefore, if abortion is murder or not) and what men and women are. Why aren't we explicitly addressing the depth of our division? It's vital. Silence makes it worse

Yes, many pro-lifers act as though abortion is simply another aspect of infant mortality, a humanitarian crisis to be numerically alleviated.

Hello: it's a metaphysical crisis. A giant hole in modernity's concept of Justice.

It is the argument about the "ordo amoris" i.e. "the order of love". The concept is that there is a fitting way in which we can and should love all aspects of reality. That the organization of our love, care, attention, must fit where and who we are. This idea is widely affirmed!

Naive to imagine that political action can fix the rot in these schools. At most it can cure 1 or 2 symptoms. But (for example) 70% of American public school campuses are indistinguishable, architecturally, from prisons. Activism can't fix that nor the many other systemic issues.

or to go your separate ways

Either path you choose you need to decide what the point is since "resist indoctrination" is pure reaction

1

Colin Redemer @RedemTheTimes 30m
What positive point are you trying to reach? What is the goal?

Simply making enough money to resist oppression and continue a personal intellectual project is not a bad answer But sometimes these groups want more

Colin Redemer @RedemTheTimes 30m
If the goal is to continue studying together in a joint effort of teachers and students to pursue truth wherever it may lead and to disseminate the truth we uncover then that's going to lead to the formation of some new thing

And that new thing isn't reactive, and it won't be called "a university" if the university is now the thing preventing this activity The name you call it matters less than the process of formation, the goal, and the continuation of the activity

Conservative attacks on higher ed are mostly nostalgia-posting. The institution as it existed 1950-2000, and the "college experience" it provided, can't exist today. But baby boomers and Gen Xers won't let go -- and will keep pushing their children to enroll.

I could go on. Israel, a 9.8 for "Religious Freedom" (do you think that score might be just a TAD inflated already?) But also Israel's "Green Pass" admits no religious exemptions, even for Orthodox Jews. But hey, at least they got their 10/10 for "Same Sex Relationships"...

Mackey posted pro-Trump jokes and memes on Twitter before the 2016 election, but—despite his anonymous identity being "doxxed"—his activity was never deemed criminal until four years later, when the Justice Department charged him with election interference just seven days into Biden's administration. Jail time for Americans with the wrong political opinions has now become an official means of "fortifying" elections against disinformation.

Especially ironic that Peterson has now begun attacking pseudonymous writing, given Sir Roger Scruton's own origin in conservative journalism:

> In 1982, he served as one of the editors of magazine 'The Salisbury Review.' The magazine was yet another attempt at popularizing the ideology of conservatism among the masses. He also wrote many articles for the magazine, mostly under pseudonyms, and later said that the magazine inspired a whole new generation of conservative intellectuals to venture into mainstream politics.

From a friend in #Californ a ...

> Over the exit of the Arrakeen landing field, crudely carved as though with a poor instrument, there was an inscription that Muad'Dib was to repeat many times. He saw it that first night on Arrakis, having been brought to the ducal command post to participate in his father's first full staff conference. The words of the inscription were a plea to those leaving Arrakis, but they fell with dark import on the eyes of a boy who had just escaped a close brush with death. They said: "O you who know what we suffer here, do not forget us in your prayers."

It doesn't imply anything about knowledge at all -- transcendence relates only to orders of being and not knowledge. It's possible for a being to transcend another being without knowing it. You might take the example of an infant who is ignorant that he transcends the family cat.

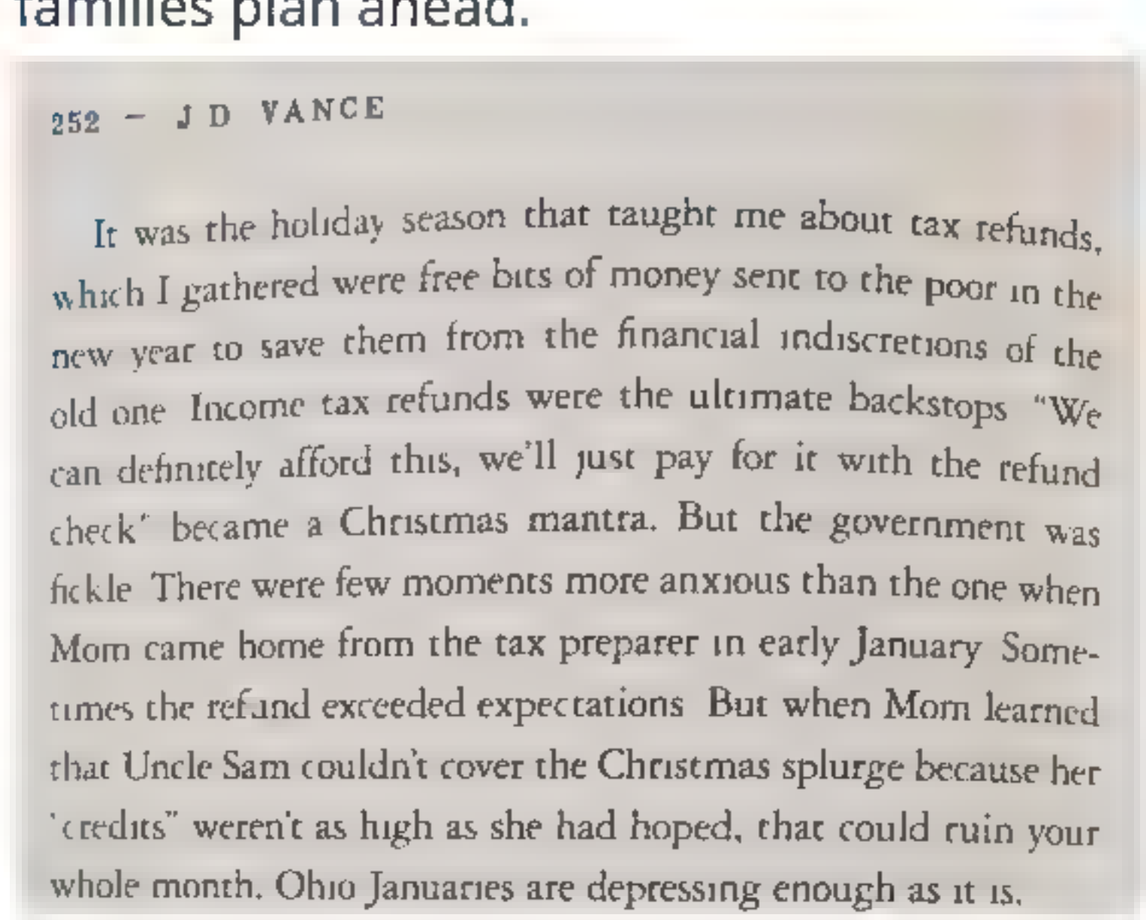
This childhood memory from @JDVance1 Christmas becomes truer every year. The goal shouldn't be arbitrary stimulus checks or "credits" -- but well-paying jobs that help families plan ahead.



252 – J D VANCE

It was the holiday season that taught me about tax refunds, which I gathered were free bits of money sent to the poor in the new year to save them from the financial indiscretions of the old one. Income tax refunds were the ultimate backstops. "We can definitely afford this, we'll just pay for it with the refund check" became a Christmas mantra. But the government was fickle. There were few moments more anxious than the one when Mom came home from the tax preparer in early January. Sometimes the refund exceeded expectations. But when Mom learned that Uncle Sam couldn't cover the Christmas splurge because her "credits" weren't as high as she had hoped, that could ruin your whole month. Ohio Januaries are depressing enough as it is.

I hadn't seen this story, brought to my attention by @GraduatedBen -- just awful behavior from the spiritual leader of 1.2 billion. It's not just misquoting or bad advisors, it's defective character.

> This hatred is not just an American phenomenon. When Cardinal Raymond Burke was hospitalized and put on a ventilator, the first sentence in the Associated Press story about it noted he was a vaccine skeptic. As Burke was fighting for his life on the ventilator, Pope Francis did not offer well wishes or ask for prayer for the cardinal, but instead commented, "Even in the College of Cardinals, there are some anti vaxxers, and one of them, poor man, is in hospital with the virus. But life is ironic." It is a world war.

Something candidates/managers need to remember as they gear up for the midterms.

Staff need:
-Sleep
-Exercise
-Good nutrition
-Decent pay

If your staff is exhausted, sedentary, fed junk, and worried about rent, they will not perform at the level you need.

Treat them well.

If enough people do this, it will hurt them, and because academics play an outsized role in the broader discourse about these issues, there is potential for broader impact.

(ofc you should probably be avoiding university entirely, but that's a different conversation)

Like most medieval authors, Hugh draws heavily from Plato and Aristotle, Augustine, Ambrose, Jerome, and the liberal arts tradition to include figures like Boethius and the School of Chartres.

> This, then, is that dignity of our nature which all naturally possess in equal measure,[16] but which all do not equally understand. For the mind, stupefied by bodily sensations and enticed out of itself by sensuous forms, has forgotten what it was, and, because it does not remember that it was anything different, believes that it is nothing except what is seen. But we are restored through instruction, so that we may recognize our nature and learn not to seek outside ourselves what we can find within. "The highest curative in life,"[17] therefore, is the pursuit of Wisdom: he who finds it is happy, and he who possesses it, blessed.[18]

Hugh also adapts some of the BEST analogies from antiquity to really help understand concepts like "the soul is in a sense all things" > different thing which it did not have before. We see how a wall receives a likeness when the form of some image or other is put upon it from the outside. But when a coiner imprints a figure upon metal, the metal, which itself is one thing, begins to represent a different thing, not just on the outside, but from its own power and its natural aptitude to do so. It is in this way that the mind, imprinted with the likenesses of all things, is said to be all things and to receive its composition from all things and to contain them not as actual components, or formally, but virtually and potentially.[15]

Mikhail Bulgakov wrote a samizdat novel called The Master and Margarita that you should all read. It's about how the devil and his posse of hell-fiends takes over academia and labor unions. And it's not slow (for a Russian novel)...this is already happening by Chapter 3.

irresistible force and speed. Berlioz made no sound, but all around him the street rang with the desperate shrieks of women's voices. The driver grabbed the electric brake the car pitched forward, jumping the rails, and with a tinkling crash the glass broke in all its windows. At this moment Berlioz heard a despairing voice: "Oh, no . . !" Once more and for the last time the moon flashed before his eyes, but it split into fragments and then went black.

Berlioz vanished from sight under the streetcar, and a round, dark object rolled across the cobbles, over the curbstone and bounced along the sidewalk.

It was a severed head.

> Gun owners and supporters of gun ownership must shift the terms of the gun debate away from special pleading for positive legal rights. If we accept the left's frame of the issue—allowing gun purchases as long as violence does not result—we are forced to take awkward policy stances, like invoking the Dickey Amendment to prevent gun-violence research. Rather, we should recognize the gun owner as the prototypical—if not always the ideal—American citizen.

What's crazy about the whole CDC comorbidity thing, is they started reporting this as far back as May 2021.

Also, 75% of deaths have 4+ comorbidities, but when you drill down even further, only 5% died with no comorbidities.

Again, this was published by CDC in May 2021

The deaths with no comorbidities are recorded as "Condition: COVID-19" but it is not at all clear that the hospital tested for comorbidities, or if they did, that they tested for the correct one. Basic medical science would infer that the virus did not randomly kill 5% of people.

Instead we can assume that the 5% who died of "COVID-19 only" were like the other 95% in having some bodily weakness that was exacerbated by their infection. There's this lovely logical tool called extrapolation

December 23rd, 2021
- U S. National Likely Voters -

- 59% now say cheating was likely in the 2020 elections, just up from 56%.
- 55% of Black voters now say there was cheating in the 2020 elections.
- 55% support 2020 election audits including 53% of Black voters.
- 60% agree that opponents of requiring a Photo ID to vote just want to make it easy to cheat in elections, including 63% of Black voters.
- 61% say Election Reform must happen in Swing States like PA, MI, GA, WI, & AZ where voters have lost confidence.
- 65% say preventing cheating more important than making it easier to vote.
- 66% say wider use of mail-in voting will lead to more cheating in elections
- 70% say private 'Zuckerbucks' type partisan election funding is "a bad thing for American Democracy," including 52% of Black voters.
- 75% say requiring Photo ID to vote is a reasonable measure to protect the integrity of elections, including 73% of Black voters
- 75% of Black voters either believe the level of difficulty to vote is currently about right or believe it is already too easy to vote.
- 90% think it is Important to prevent cheating in elections, including 83% who say it's Very Important. These are down from 95% and 89% respectively in October Among Black voters, 87% now say it is Important

"Critical" remains a great descriptor. One thing you'll notice about the Ancient Greek masters is that they vigorously attacked and criticized what they called "the unexamined life." It's a pillar of their politics, their ethics, their categorizations and cosmologies

Despite its more recent championing by campus conservatives, academic freedom has long been used on the left as a tactic for avoiding basic accountability. Burnham included the term in his list of liberal sentences in his 1964 book, Suicide of the West.

medieval farmers used to bury the Eucharist in their fields according to Burchard of Worms Nevertheless, it seems reasonably clear from the writings of a German bishop named Burchard of Worms that right around 1000, there were still many customs that some might call "superstitious" but that the faithful practiced. It is possible that many thought these to be more important and more efficacious, if categorically no different, than the Christian sacraments. Surely "practitioners" were impressed with the talismanic power of activities such as the recitation of secret sayings, charms, and incantations (often using Christian words); sacrifices at holy stones, at crossroads, and at wells; and the reliance on amulets, such as the use of holy girdles (to ease the pain of childbirth , and such powers included the consecrated host and relics, sometimes buried in fields for agricultural good fortune Generally, these were highly practical and functional customs. They were used to harness the power of the deity, to master the elements, and to receive advantages, including protection from the evil forces that inhabited the cosmos of the parishioners and threatened to overwhelm them with adversity

Higgins, who served in the Army and later in the Pentagon as a career official in the Bush and Obama administrations, according to his biography, was fired from the NSC in 2017 after authoring a memo claiming that a "deep state" band of officials and movements were opposing President Donald Trump. He defined the opposition as the media, Islamists, Black Lives Matter, the ACLU, the United Nations and cultural Marxists leading a coordinated effort to delegitimize and subvert the President.

The socialization speech has been destroyed as the current pandemic policy makes the [illegible] attractive for children. Until recently, we were not even allowed to browse the children's section and had to find books online or in a very limited selection housed in the adult section.

Before 2020, the children's programming at the library was [illegible] rate. There were almost daily reading hours that involved stories and group activities as well as well-selected children's books. Crafting hours happened weekly. Dances around books. We attended almost every week — as did many children around town.

Now, after everything else in Latrobe has gone back to meeting in person, all children's programming at the library is still conducted virtually. Many parents, myself included, are done with pretending that digital programming offers anywhere near the same quality of experience as meeting in person, where our children can see each other's faces. The global educational experiment of putting small children in front of screens has largely failed, and parents and children want to move on.

America has moved on. Our school district has moved on. Why is our library stuck back in 2020?

Many local parents have started trying to attend other public libraries in our network, hoping for more personal choice in masking.
Unfortunately, there is little variation from the intense COVID regulations, and some area libraries are even less welcoming to children and those who opt not to mask. The Mount Pleasant library,

It's not accurate to say the reformation is the origin of this idea. Conscience as a type of authority pre-existed the 16th century. E.g. if you read Ratzinger's critique of voluntaristic papal authority you will see that he finds the origin of the idea in Paul, Basil, Augustine.

Thanks. The tweet was intentionally provocatively phrased. A non-280 characters version would emphasize that while pre-Reformation Catholic thought is certainly aware of the importance of conscience, it required the Reformation to give it enough oxygen for it to burst into flame

Brad Littlejohn @WBLittlejohn 5m
Or, to change the metaphor, late medieval and early modern Romanism was scarcely a promising soil for the seed of conscience to take root and flourish. The Reformation broke up the stony ground with a sharp plough and dumped the sweet manure of the Word of God on it.

Brad Littlejohn @WBLittlejohn 4m
The concept as used by Newman and Ahmari clearly owes more to Luther than to Bellarmine, IMHO

Is your argument that Protestantism introduced the possibility of disagreeing with church authorities? Or increased the ease of doing so? If the former, it seems false. If the latter, it seems hard to argue that it was a positive development (given the subsequent history).

t's not accurate to say the reformation s the or gin of this idea. Conscience as a type of authority pre-existed the 16th century E.g. If you read Ratzinger's critique of voluntar st.c papal author ty you wil see that he finds the origin of the idea n Paul, Bas l, Augustine

And of course scholastics were extremely aware of this question, even very early. Abelard has some interesting passages about conscience as a counterpart to authoritative instruction when it comes to individual cu pabi ity

Thanks. The tweet was intentional y provocat.vely phrased A non-280 characters vers on wou d emphasize that whi.e pre-Reformation Catholic thought is certa nly aware of the importance of conscience, it required the Reformation to give it enough oxygen for it to burst into flame

Or, to change the metaphor, late med eva and early modern Romanism was scarcely a promising soi for the seed of conscience to take root and flourish The Reformation broke up the stony ground with a sharp plough and dumped the sweet manure of the Word of God on it

The concept as used by Newman and Ahmari clear y owes more to Luther than to Bel arm ne, IMHO

People don't seem to understand that the United States government is just a complicated and interlocking web of forms, memos, and budget lines.

Any decently accomplished bureaucracy hacker is able to accomplish things in a way that is indistinguishable from magic.

near Iraq and America was divided. Afghanistan we could understand; word was that was where the enemy was headquartered, but Iraq? Invading a sovereign country without clear provocation struck many of us as wrong or at least left us ambivalent. President Bush came out to give us a pep talk to gin up support and I was in the crowd. I will never forget him saying, "I don't know why our enemy doesn't fear us. We have high-tech apparati." I shit you not, the man said apparati like it was Latin class. One guy in the crowd next to me yelled "WE OUGHTA GO AFTER SADDAM!" The crowd popped and the President laughed. Vince McMahon eat your heart out.

Well they got their war. They even lied to get it, not that it seems to have mattered. (Consequences are just for Proles.) My unit went there after Afghanistan, and among the thousands who died, theirs and ours, one was a Cherry from the first fire-team I led. His nickname was "Van." He deployed to Iraq, and I'm told my old squad leader had to climb up a tree to fetch Van's body down after the IED took his life and threw what was left into the sky. Van left behind a newlywed wife and an infant daughter. Another one of my buddies, whom I'd seen go from a scrappy Private to a tough squad leader ("Decicho" in my book), killed himself last year, leaving behind a young son as well. Of those thousands who were lost or marked by that war, those were some of mine. They and the rest of the men in my unit were brave and it was an honor to serve with them, yet I cannot forget that our actions downrange were in service to policies built upon a great deal of lies and treachery. We were betrayed then. And we are being betrayed again.

Spengler didn't mention this but WWI was also an inevitable result of the mechanized war machine, which couldn't be sustained in times of peace.

Now the analogue is new technologies of war, sigint/cyber, $$$ coercion, regime change that are hard to stop w/o kinetic counterattack

To what extent is "just war theory" now simply part of the modern Pax-American blather about "ruuuuules-based international ooooorder"?

Anyone who's read history knows that real leaders always consider military action to achieve their geopolitical objectives. It's expected.

Anthony J. Constantini @Jay_Conz · 8m
The issue is that they find him credible to begin with

I also think you'd find that many did indeed have illusions up until February 24th- enough to be a loud and sizable minority

Regardless though that's only half the piece, as the main thrust is a defense of Ukraine. 1/2

Takeaway for candidates: if you're going to use a scandal to get in the news, make sure it's a real scandal that will resonate with your voters and can be independently verified. You can't PR your way into office if there's nothing behind the curtain. 9/9

From LA Times

Strikingly, the share of Latinos who identified as white in the 2020 census fell from about 53% in 2010 to about 20% in 2020

When it asked for race, the census in 2020 added prompts under the "white" category that included countries not associated with Hispanics.

It would be crazy if it just outright dipped from 53% to 20% I think. Probably anti-white rhetoric played a role, but there's also just a lot of ambiguity in how "Hispanics" identify themselves (most people south of the Rio Grande have never heard the word "hispanic").

Would be tough to demonstrate that the NT writers -- who wrote in Greek, spoke/thought in Greek, used the Greek LXX, and were educated under Hellenism -- still were somehow able to divorce their use of words like soma and logos from NeoPlatonic content. How could one prove this??

> n his intercourse with non-Jews Gamaliel was unconstrained, for which he was sometimes blamed. A friendly conversation is recorded (Er. 64b) which he had with a heathen on the way from Acre to Ecdippa (Achzib). On the Sabbath he sat upon the benches of heathen merchants (Tosef. M. K. ii. 8). Various details have been handed down by tradition concerning the relig ous practices of Gamaliel and his house (see the following Tosefta passages: Dem. iii. 15; Shab. i. 22, xii. [xiii.], end; Yom-Tob i. 22; ii. 10, 13, 14, 16). In Gamaliel's house it was not customary to say "Marpe" (Recovery) when any one sneezed, because that was a heathenish superstition (Tosef. Shab. vii. [viii.] 5; comp. Ber. 53a). Two concessions were made to Gamaliel's household in the way of relaxing the severity of the rules set up as a barrier against heathendom: permission to use a mirror in cutting the hair of the head (Tosef., Ab. Zarah, iii. 5; comp. Yer. 'Ab. Zarah 41a), and to learn Greek (Tosef., Soṭah, xv. 8; Soṭah, end). In regard to the latter Gamaliel's son Simon relates (Soṭah 49b) that many children were instructed in his father's house in "Greek wisdom."

An awareness ≠ an nfluence. Paul states in 2 Corinth ans that the wor d by its wisdom knew not God What is he referring to other than the prevail ing "wisdom" of the time? He says the Ephesians are "built upon the foundation of the apost es and the prophets" not phi osophers.

Ukraine Presidency Seeks To Stem 'Pandora Papers' Fallout

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky's office on Monday sought to justify his use of offshore companies as protecting him against pro-Russian forces, following leaked revelations in the Pandora Papers

A former comedian, Zelensky was elected

According to its findings, two of the offshore companies belonging to Zelensky's partners were used to buy three lavish properties in central London.

The report also found that Zelensky, just before he was elected, transferred his stake in one of the offshore companies to his top aide Sergiy Shefir - the target of a shooting attack last month

An adviser to Zelensky's chief of staff said Monday that the president had created the offshore companies to "protect" the group's incomes against the "aggressive actions" of the "pro-Putin regime of then pro-Russian

No, it wouldn't have. We see a people that wants to fight, and that changes things. How people respond to help matters. Don't obscure that. It's not unreasonable to think the courage they've displayed so far means they've earned the right to more help.

> Austin Stone @austinstone

If courage were enough to earn American blood and treasure we'd be standing up for the Yemenis right now.

Of course, our Pentagon leadership doesn't even recognize courage in our own ranks, much less overseas.

Buckle up for about a week of impotent conservative railing on about how that laptop was not Russian disinformation. But they always knew that, they knew you knew that, and they didn't care. And they don't care now either. They're going to move on to the next thing.

Trakl was supported early on by Wittgenstein, and his verse was cherished by both Rilke and Heidegger

Trakl published a few volumes and contributed to Der Brenner. His verse is considered 'autumnal' and melancholy

Sin, guilt, decay, harvest, sacrifice predominate

AUTUMN SOUL
Second version

Hunting calls and blood-baying,
Beyond cross and brown hill
The pond's mirror gently blinds one,
The hawk's screech is hard and clear.

Over stubble-field and path
A black silence lurks in fear,
Purest sky amid the branches,
Only the brook runs silent and still.

Fish and game soon slip away
Blue soul, darksome wandering
Soon severed us from loved ones, others.
Evening alters sense and image.

Bread and wine of sinless living,
God into your mild hands
Man places the dark ending,
All guilt and red torment

Charles Wing-Uexküll @CWingUexkull · 4h
At the outbreak of WW1 Trakl joined the Austrian-Hungarian Army as a medical orderly. But he was driven to madness by the carnage after a battle at Grosdek. Trakl tried to shoot himself, was stopped, sent to a hospital, he wrote his last poem and ODed on cocaine

Charles Wing-Uexküll @CWingUexkull · 4h
Pretty intense guy and story but I'm digging his stuff and will be posting more from the 2005 Alexander Stillmark translation

The United States will welcome up to 100,000 Ukrainians and other displaced people fleeing the conflict in Ukraine, a senior administration official told reporters traveling with President Biden on Thursday.

While most displaced Ukrainians want to stay in Europe, the U.S. government expects to use its refugee admission program as well as the parole system and immigrant and non-immigrant visas to bring in Ukrainians, the official said, noting Ukrainian-Americans are eager to welcome family members into the country. Vulnerable people including LGBTQI people, people with medical needs and journalists and dissidents will also be

Catholic archbishop:

The world crisis with which the dissolution of traditional society is being prepared has also involved the Catholic Church, whose hierarchy is held hostage by apostates who are courtiers of power [...] There was a time in which popes and prelates confronted kings without concern for human respect, because they knew they spoke with the voice of Jesus Christ, the King of kings. The Rome of the Caesars and popes is now deserted and silent, just as for centuries the Second Rome of Constantinople has also been silent. Perhaps Providence has ordained that Moscow, the Third Rome, will today in the sight of the world take on the role of κατέχον (2 Thess 2,6-7), of eschatological obstacle to the Antichrist. If the errors of Communism were spread by the Soviet Union, even to the point of imposing themselves within the Church, Russia and Ukraine can today have an epochal role in the restoration of Christian civilization, contributing to bringing the world a period of peace from which the Church too will rise again purified and renewed in her ministers.

I mix blank pages, double print, ghost print or mark/write in them just in case they have a way to scan and use some sort of recognition software. That way they have to look at thousands upon thousands of pages one by one and look and random scribblings and drawn dicks while doing their job.

It's a whole pallet of papers with trades so I hire a guy to forklift that shit and send it just in the offchance that having to deal with a pallet is troublesome for them.

All the documents are numbered but I pack everything """"completely out of order""""" (as in the lower numbers always happen to be at the bottom of the pallet) in case the order of the trades is important. If order is important they now have to deal lift boxes and have them laying around before they can even start checking the numbers.

My normal trades are also in those pages so they can't Et tu, @POLITICO?

Trump is not toxic for his party everywhere. Republicans did better than expected in House races in 2020 because of the high MAGA turnout Trump generated. But he's deadly for the GOP in the decisive suburbs at the heart of 2022 politics. Recall how Virginia's GLENN YOUNGKIN treated Trump like Voldemort, concerned that even uttering his name would repel potential supporters in NoVa.

The main reason "economic issues" often seem to win is because propaganda doesn't work as well in changing people's minds when it comes to their money.

It's easy to lead the masses to "abortion is health care." It's much harder to tell them "Russia is charging you $5 a gallon."

Isn't it interesting how predictable it is which side a Pope will take in a given conflict based on whether he is a "liberal" or "conservative" pope?

Almost like "liberal" isn't a theological point of view, but more of an alliance with other leaders in the liberal world order.

STARBUCK CAMPAIGN TO ACCEPT BITCOIN DONATIONS

ROBBY STARBUCK FOR CONGRESS

With the Bitcoin 2022 conference kicking off in Miami, I am excited to announce that I am launching a BitPay wallet to accept Bitcoin donations for my congressional campaign, starting today.

Technologies like cryptocurrency are the future—and if elected officials don't start learning more about these technologies, we'll undoubtedly fall behind our foreign competitors. Communist China has banned cryptocurrency trading and mining because for them, it's all about control. American values are the opposite: we champion freedom of innovation. Whether it's digital sound money like Bitcoin, app-friendly Ethereum, or any other cryptocurrency/blockchain technology, I'll fight against burdensome regulation.

Bitcoin has a proven record of success as a currency that has been adopted by individuals, companies, and nations. It's also a valuable check on the financial oligarchy. Without cryptocurrency, we're at the mercy of tyrants—just look at the Canadian truckers!

This is an important quarter for us as we push toward the primary, and we need freedom-loving Americans to join the fight. Whether you choose to contribute with Bitcoin or fiat, I want to thank you for your support. Let's keep the momentum going and take back our great country!

You can contribute with crypto now at starbuck2022.com/crypto-donate/

Robby Starbuck is available for interviews. For press and media inquiries please contact press@starbuck2022.com

"All press is good press"? not according to the Rothschilds the very earliest years of their fame the Rothschilds were subjected to markedly more vituperation than glorification in the public sphere. Of course most monarchs politicians and other public figures in the early nineteenth century occasionally found themselves held up to ridicule in newspapers pamphlets and other media especially in those parts of Europe where censorship was lax. But the Rothschilds often seemed to attract a specially intense form of criticism. One reason for this was

A Wrinkle in Time author @MadeleineLEngle, writing on Dante and C.S. Lewis, has a very strong explanation of the allegorical vs. anagogical senses of exegesis.

For quite a while I struggled to understand the difference between the allegorical level and the anagogical level. Finally it came to me that allegory is simile: this is like this. But an anagogue is metaphor: this is that, it contains within it something of that which it is trying to express.

I do not believe that allegory is always conscious, and perhaps it is best when it is not. Perhaps I've never much cared for Bunyan because I feel that he is beating me over the head with his allegory. And—despite the sermonizing—MacDonald and Kingsley do not. They are not objective teachers, but subjective ones; the sermon is as much for their own personal benefit as for the reader's.

The anagogical level, I am convinced, is never conscious when it is there; it is sheer gift of grace; the writer cannot strive for it deliberately for that would be to ensure failure.

So I understand Lewis's protestations that he is not writing allegory, of course he isn't. Nevertheless, there is an allegorical level to his stories, and, when he is at his best, an anagogical level. A writer who has grown up on E. Aquinas certainly knew Plato's views. He was the foremost commentator on Pseudo-Dionysius, full of citation from Plotinus and Proclus (ergo Plato).

Good point often missed on the chronology.

Your overall argument is correct, especially re: Laws. Justin Martyr an early adapter.

In Jan. '20, the FDA approved a drug called Palforzia that claimed to "cure peanut allergies."

It didn't cure anything. Palforzia, it turns out was just a bunch of crushed up peanuts in a capsule. Price: $50/pill.

FDA almost caught heat for this. But Covid buried the story. RIP

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 21m

The hyperbolic meltdowns, the hysterical tantrum throwing, simply at the prospect that we might have a bit more free speech on here. Implicit in this is the leftist fear (well founded) that in a field of "open discourse" we will win. Their message is built on lies, not truth.

1 3 37

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 18m

The only reason these insane ideas, the nutty "gender identity," the vehemently anti white hatred, the ridiculous Ukrainian propaganda, are allowed to "flourish" is because they ban dissent and they know this. The amount of "true believers" is actually quite small

1 2 18

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 17m

Our ideas are compelling not simply because we are edgy and fun (though we are) but they're compelling for the same reason our memes work and the left does not the truth of what we have to say is prima facie obvious and doesn't need a 5k word indoctrination session to understand

Disagree here. Voting/election issues garner big energy in PA.

Other issues in the poll (crime/abortion/guns) received a similar share (~4%). Yet we wouldn't say Rs who campaign on pro-life are "running for Trump" because Trump is pro-life.

It's not good statistical analysis.

The midwit meme calls to mind Jacques Ellul and his 1965 work "Propaganda". Here is a summary from the introduction, on the particular vulnerability of intellectuals, created by education and their desire to have opinions:

A related point, central in Ellul's thesis, is that modern propaganda cannot work without "education"; he thus reverses the widespread notion that education is the best prophylactic against propaganda. On the contrary, he says, education, or what usually goes by that word in the modern world, is the absolute prerequisite for propaganda. In fact, education is largely identical with what Ellul calls "pre-propaganda"—the conditioning of minds with vast amounts of incoherent information, already dispensed for ulterior purposes and posing as "facts" and as "education." Ellul follows through by designating intellectuals as virtually the most vulnerable of all to modern propaganda, for three reasons: (1) they absorb the largest amount of secondhand, unverifiable information, (2) they feel a compelling need to have an opinion on every important question of our time, and thus easily succumb to opinions offered to them by propaganda on all such indigestible pieces of information; (3) they consider themselves capable of "judging for themselves." They literally need propaganda.

In fact, the need for propaganda on the part of the "propagandee" is one of the most powerful elements of Ellul's thesis. Cast out of the disintegrating microgroups of the past, such as family, church, or village, the individual is plunged into mass society and thrown back upon his own inadequate resources, his

Abortion is not quite at the level of George Floyd, but it is one of their most sacred rituals. Understanding that progressivism is a cult has implications. It means that we're in a religious war. You have to fight with this in mind

The way to win a religious war is to show that your enemies' god is weak. You do this by defying its commandments, defacing its temples, and mocking its rituals. We are standing in the public square and desecrating their god while it sits by silently. It does not scare us.

Well, Roe and Casey are getting overturned. Guess I can retire from this politics thing now.

Oh wait, I still live in a country populated with ghouls whose lust for infant blood will now be constrained only by mere stare decisis.

I guess there's still work to do.

I have sued @TNGOP in Federal Court over my illegal removal from the ballot. I'm not going to stop fighting until our voters in Tennessee have every choice on their ballot in this election. A secret, illegal backroom vote should not overrule our voters. Freedom matters! 🇺🇸🇺🇸🇺🇸

STARBUCK CAMPAIGN LAUNCHES LEGAL FIGHT FOR VOTER RIGHTS

ROBBY STARBUCK FOR CONGRESS

Yesterday, my team and I officially responded to the @TNGOP scheme to remove me and others from the primary ballot, with a lawsuit in federal court. I took this major step to fight for the rights of Tennessee voters, only after the state party, in the face of a detailed legal demand and a mountain of evidence, refused to do the right thing and correct what they did wrong by disenfranchising their own voters.

Our complaint alleges that state GOP officials used secret and irregular means to prevent a FREE and FAIR election consistent with the state party bylaws, and state and federal law. I started my campaign to fight for the people of Tennessee- and now I'm fighting for Tennesseans' right to vote for whom they choose–including any opponents. I will fight with everything I have against this illegal disenfranchisement of Republican voters.

The state party is trying to go beyond the scope of what they're allowed to do by locking a bonafide Republican like me off the ballot. It's the same sort of backroom trickery some tried to use against Trump in 2016 at the Republican convention–which is ironic since the state party is trying to land the next Republican convention to Nashville. Tennessee voters won't forgive this behind the back theft of their choice on Election Day.Disenfranchising our voters robs them of an America First candidate aligned with President Trump, leaving them with only weak alternatives. Tennesseans deserve better.

This is not communist Cuba, where my family escaped from. In America, the party doesn't get to just hand-pick their buddies –the PEOPLE get to choose the candidate they want on Election Day!

This lawsuit is a testing point–and hopefully a turning point–that could end this type of backroom politics that should have gone out of style decades ago. We're not going to stop fighting until WE THE PEOPLE are given our constitutional rights back and Republican voters –not party insiders meeting secretly– get to chose their candidates.

In Oration 24 St. Gregory the Theologian recounts how the virgin Justina prayed to Mary to defend her from the spells of the magician Cyprian. He states it in a very matter of fact way, suggesting prayers to Mary were something his congregation was quite familiar with

ORATION 24 149

11 Invoking these and still other models and beseeching the Virgin Mary to help a virgin in distress, she takes refuge in a regimen of fasting and sleeping on the ground. Since it was her beauty that placed her in this predicament, she tries by these means to ravage her looks and so pull the kindling from the flame and dissipate what fuels our passions. At the same time, she tries to win God's favor through her faith and self-denial, for nothing at all serves God so well as mortification and he re-

The Making of the Atomic Bomb by @RhodesRichard1.

Rhodes' book is more than a chronicle of events; it's a philosophical journey through the minds of scientists and public figures involved in the most consequential discovery of the 20th century.

Latino Bodybuilders for Hellenism @LatinxPuter · 2m

". begin with birth how can a man become physically best, strongest?—If the father takes exercise and eats well and hardens himself, and the mother of future child is physically strong and takes exercise "
Same man wrote the following. Don't look up. Can you guess his politics?

25. There was a time when the life of men was unordered bestial and the slave of force, when there was no reward for the virtuous and no punishment for the wicked. Then, I think, men devised retributory laws, in order that Justice might be dictator and have arrogance as its slave, and if anyone sinned, he was punished. Then, when the laws forbade them to commit open crimes of violence, and they began to do them in secret, a wise and clever man invented fear (of the gods) for mortals, that there might be some means of frightening the wicked, even if they do anything or say or think it in secret. Hence he introduced the Divine (religion), saying that there is a God flourishing with immortal life, hearing and seeing with his mind, and thinking of everything and caring about these things, and having divine nature, who will hear everything said among mortals, and will be able to see all that is done. And even if you plan anything evil in secret, you will not escape the gods in this for they have surpassing intelligence. In saying these words, he introduced the pleasantest of teachings, covering up the truth with a false theory and he said that the gods dwell there where he could most frighten men by saying it, whence he knew that fears exist for mortals and rewards for the hard life: in the upper periphery, where they saw lightnings and heard the dread rumblings of thunder, and the starry-faced body of heaven, the beautiful embroidery of Time the skilled craftsman, whence come forth the bright mass of the sun, and the wet shower upon the earth. With such fears did he surround mankind, through which he well established the deity with his argument, and in a fitting place, and quenched lawlessness among men. Thus, I think, for the first time did someone persuade mortals to believe in a race of deities.

Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see In Frankfurt the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. "Amid the ceaseless chatter of 21st century society it is enough to be stopped in your tracks by the ringing of a church bell or the howl of a wolf." Very nice @BDSixsmith

I hope that poetry enriches life in a holistic sense. I hope that it can make us more appreciative, sensitive, passionate, grounded, thoughtful, knowledgeable and wise. Some people claim to have had such experiences. Rod Dreher's book How Dante Can Save Your Life, for example, explores how the author of The Divine Comedy can be a source of "solace and strength."

Yet the impact of poem can be enough. Amid the ceaseless chatter of 21st Century society it is enough to be stopped in your tracks by the ringing of a church bell or the howl of a wolf. In such moments, life means something, and its meaning can be measured not just by our words but by the tingle in our spine and the lump in our throat.

Ben Sixsmith is an English writer living in Poland.

Real investigative journalism means telling the public just how much $ Arizona spent on its 1 brick of potassium cyanide

The state of Arizona is preparing to kill death row inmates using hydrogen cyanide, the same lethal gas that was deployed at Auschwitz.

Documents obtained by the Guardian reveal that Arizona's department of corrections has spent more than $2,000 in procuring the ingredients to make cyanide gas. The department bought a solid brick of potassium cyanide in December for $1,530.

It also purchased sodium hydroxide pellets and sulfuric acid which are intended to be used to generate the deadly gas. The gas chamber itself, built in 1949 and disused for 22 years, has been dusted off and, according to the department, "refurbished".

The Top 10 list of reasons why Josh Shapiro would be a clownish, B den-level disaster as governor of our state

1. As Attorney General, Shapiro has been Gov. Tom Wolf's loyal clerk.

He rubber-stamped every scandal, every poor decision that crushed businesses and families, and every bit of Wolf's performative activism.

PA doesn't need another clueless, incompetent liberal in charge.

On March 18, the Pennsylvania Department of Health issued guidance mandating nursing home facilities accept COVID-19 positive residents.[4] The guidance stated "[n]ursing care facilities must continue to accept new admissions and receive readmissions for current residents who have been discharged from the hospital…"[5] While you altered the guidance on May 12, the new guidance stated that "a positive test result is not a reason to refuse readmission to a resident…"[6] The American Health Care Association said this order would "result in more people going to the hospital and more deaths."[7]

According to the most recent available data, Pennsylvania has suffered 4,268 nursing home deaths related to COVID-19.[8] That is more than 68% of the State's total COVID-19 deaths and more than 3% of the State's entire nursing home population.[9]

Part of why Rufo is so successful is that he knows exactly where the hinge points are in the lefty machinery—in this case the edu grad school credential ing racket—and instead of clever 4D chess persuasion gambits, just goes straight at it with a big swing of the hammer

Teaching candidates with advanced degrees, says anti-CRT activist Christopher Rufo, should be viewed with suspicion: Don't "hire the ones with the masters, because those are the crazies."

In April, anti-CRT activist Christopher Rufo called for state lawmakers to rescind requirements that teachers hold education degrees, claiming that masters programs in education only exposed future teachers to left-wing ideology. Instead, Rufo argued, public schools should only require bachelor's degrees for new hires, predicting that in time school officials would come to view applicants with advanced degrees as suspicious: Don't "hire the ones with the masters, because those are the crazies."

A MESSAGE FROM ED STACK & LAUREN HOBART

Dear teammates,

You are the heart of our business, and we are committed to protecting your health and well-being.

Today, the Supreme Court announced a decision to overturn Roe v. Wade, removing the federal right to an abortion and leaving the decision up to each state.

While we do not know what decision each state will make in response to this ruling, we at DICK'S Sporting Goods are prepared to ensure that all teammates have consistent and safe access to the benefits we provide, regardless of the state in which you live.

In response to today's ruling, we are announcing that if the state you live in restricts access to abortion, DICK'S Sporting Goods will provide up to $4,000 in travel expense reimbursement to travel to the nearest location where that care is legally available. This benefit will be provided to any teammate, spouse or dependent enrolled in our medical plan, along with one support person.

We recognize people feel passionately about this topic -- and that there are teammates and athletes who will not agree with this decision. However, we also recognize that decisions involving health and families are deeply personal and made with thoughtful consideration. We are making this decision so our teammates can access the same health care options, regardless of where they live, and choose what is best for them.

e-NEWS is your resource for company news and information.
If you have feedback or questions, please reply to TeammateCommunications@dcsp.com.

missiles. I spent weeks flying over and driving through devastated countries. The great cities of Germany had been bombed into piles of rubble, under which lay the bodies of thousands of men, women, and children. Refugees lined both sides of the highways I drove along, pulling handcarts, pushing baby carriages, carrying huge bundles on their backs. Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces. Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained. In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see. In Frankfurt, the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs. At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled.

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed. Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race. This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life. I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. I considered renouncing my profession and living far away from modern technology, some place where I would be in touch with nature and the earth.

I had the freedom of farm life in Minnesota, the freedom to choose the occupation I wanted to follow, and then the freedom to fly over the world as man had never flown over it before. Of course I had no opportunity to take part in cattle raids or raids to capture women. That would have been unrespectable, illegal, and uncivilized.

The Honorable Nancy Pelosi
Speaker
U S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

The Honorable Chuck Schumer
Majority Leader
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Speaker Pelosi and Leader Schumer:

We write to urge your support for restricting the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction in the areas of abortion, marriage equality, non-procreative intimacy, and contraception. In doing so, we can ensure that, as Congress takes legislative action to codify each of these fundamental rights, a radical, reckless, and newly constituted majority on the Court cannot further undermine the protections we would enact.

The Supreme Court's devastating decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization (2022) is unprecedented. For the first time in our nation's history, the Court rescinded an individual right recognized by our Constitution. In Planned Parenthood v. Casey (1992), the Supreme Court recognized that "overruling Roe's central holding would not only reach an unjustifiable result under stare decisis principles but would seriously weaken the Court's capacity to exercise the judicial power and to function as the Supreme Court of a Nation dedicated to the rule of law."

Justices Breyer, Sotomayor, and Kagan echoed these sentiments in their dissenting opinion in Dobbs, noting that the legitimacy of the Court is "earned over time" but "can be destroyed much more quickly." The justices noted that it is impossible for the public not to conclude that their "constitutional protections h[a]ng by a thread–that a new majority, adhering to a new 'doctrinal school,' could by 'dint of numbers' alone expunge their rights."

As a result of the Supreme Court's actions, millions of people will no longer have access to abortion care, a crisis disproportionately impacting women, people of color, LGBTQIA+ people, and the undocumented. Moreover, Justice Thomas' concurrence in Dobbs laid out a clear plan for the Supreme Court to overturn Obergefell v. Hodges (2015), Lawrence v. Texas (2003), and Griswold v. Connecticut (1965) in the near future, placing the rights to marriage equality, non-procreative intimacy, and contraception in jeopardy. The irresponsible and harmful decision in Dobbs demands swift action to fully codify these rights at the national level and prevent the Supreme Court from further dismantling them.

The House of Representatives already passed the Women's Health Protection Act ("WHPA") last fall to codify the constitutional right to abortion, and if this bill becomes law, we can expect that legal challenges will eventually come before the Supreme Court again. Once more, the constitutional right to abortion would be put at risk. We are concerned by the Court's dismantling of other statutes duly enacted by Congress, including the Voting Rights Act and the Clean Air Act.

The solution is to prevent the Supreme Court from reviewing the constitutionality or legality of the WHPA, which can be done in the next version of the WHPA that we pass this term. Congress' authority to limit the Court's jurisdiction is clear. Article III, Section 2 of the Constitution establishes that the Supreme Court shall have "appellate Jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make." Accordingly, the WHPA, similar provisions must be included in our bills that seek

The Supreme Court itself has repeatedly and consistently affirmed Congress' Article III powers. In Durousseau v. United States (1810), the Supreme Court held that "the appellate powers of the Supreme Court of the United States, are given by the Constitution, but they are limited and regulated by the Judicial Act and other acts passed by Congress on the subject." Most recently, in Patchak v. Zinke (2018), Justice Thomas held for the Court that, "When Congress strips federal courts of jurisdiction, it exercises a valid legislative power no less than when it lays taxes, coins money, declares war, or invokes any other power that the Constitution grants it. Indeed, this Court has held that Congress generally does not violate Article III when it strips federal jurisdiction over a class of cases."

As we Democrats plan for further legislative action to protect and enshrine abortion rights, as well as the three other fundamental rights called into question in Justice Thomas' concurring opinion in Dobbs, we urge the exercise of Congress' constitutional powers under Article III to include language that removes the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction over such legislation. Congress can instead assign exclusive appellate jurisdiction to another federal court, such as the D.C. Circuit. For instance, doing so in the WHPA would direct all appeals involving the WHPA to the D.C. Circuit, avoiding appellate review by other far-right circuits and the Supreme Court. This term, we included a similar provision in H.R. 1, the For the People Act, which directed appellate review of that legislation to the D.C. Circuit.

The American people want to see Congress protect their fundamental rights, and the Constitution grants us the powers to do so. Congress, as the branch of government that is closest to the people, has a duty to exercise its powers For the People. Thank you for your consideration and leadership in defense of fundamental rights and the Constitution.

Sincerely,

Member of Congress | Member of Congress | Member of Congress

Very short scientist dreams of making Americans shorter "to reduce their ecological footprint" lol

And so size reduction could be one way to reduce a person's ecological footprint. For instance if you reduce the average U.S. height by just 15cm, you could reduce body mass by 21% for men and 25% for women, with a corresponding reduction in metabolic rates by some 15% to 18%, because less tissue means lower energy and nutrient needs.

Queer theorist Sarah Hankins argues that drag performances are a form of "sex work" that "allows the audience member to temporarily embody one or more of a number of 'bad/unnatural' social positions, for instance the pedophile … even the sexualized youth/child themselves."

hegemonically gendered economy by taking money out of that licit circulation, and it discursively challenges the radical feminist figuration of sex work's dominating male and dominated female.

Straight-ahead's tip exchange also draws audience members into all manner of illicit sexual relations. Normal social adults are not supposed to find the excessively demanding female or the submissive male appealing. Yet during gender performances, spectators do. The act of paying a dominant/domineering woman, a male supplicant, a hapless wage slave, or a boy allows the audience member to temporarily embody one or more of a number of "bad/unnatural" social positions (Rubin 1984, 153), for instance the pedophile, the closeted gay chickenhawk, the predatory female cougar, the sugar daddy or momma, even the sexualized youth/child themselves.

Such interactions call to mind bondage-and-discipline/sadomasochism (BDSM), a set of quasi-commercialized sexual practices largely developed within queer communities. Gayle Rubin has argued that hegemony is main-suggesting that money may circulate according the logic of a structure more complex than gender alone.

How can a mode of gender performance decline to perform gender? I have tipped Katya Zamolodchikova as a cat (a large, sexy cat), Johnny Blazes as a zombie removing hir/its own body parts as ze lurches down the catwalk at Jacques' Cabaret, and TraniWreck cast principal Madge of Honor performing as a . . . thing wrapped in terrifying black plastic, standing still under a spotlight. My arousal during such performances emerges in response to the erotic valences of the forbidden (I want to fuck a cat?), the grotesque (necrophilia?), or the frightening. It is these effects, more so than hints of implicit gender, such as the cat's bosom or the zombie's tattered gown, that fix my attention and turn me on.

Congresswoman Liz Cheney is a true American heroine. Countless individuals throughout the millennia have placed their lives and careers on the line for standing up for what is Right and Just. A small sampling from the last century include Maximilian Kolbe, Edith Stein, Franz Jaggerstatter (the subject of Terrence Malik's film A HIDDEN LIFE), not to speak of Jesus Christ himself. God bless and keep her for standing up to this pervasive evil that has come to define today's Republican Party.

Today is the Catholic feast of St. Maximilian Kolbe, who gave his life in Auschwitz for a fellow prisoner who had a family. He was starved and finally executed via injection of carbolic acid when he wouldn't just die. He was a hero. He was also an antisemite. A thread. (1/12) missiles. I spent weeks flying over and driving through devastated countries. The great cities of Germany had been bombed into piles of rubble, under which lay the bodies of thousands of men, women, and children. Refugees lined both sides of the highways I drove along, pulling handcarts, pushing baby carriages, carrying huge bundles on their backs. Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces. Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained. In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see. In Frankfurt, the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs. At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled.

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed. Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race. This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life. I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. I considered renouncing my profession and living far away from modern technology, some place where I would be in touch with nature and the earth.

and Europeans. "You know, if I could be reincarnated," a British game warden said as we sat at an evening campfire, "I'd like to be a Masai moran, a warrior, a hundred years ago. Just think of going off on one of those raiding parties and bringing back all the cattle you could steal, and a lot of squealing little Kikuyu girls for wives!"

"We have known freedom far greater than yours," a Masai told me. It disturbed me to have my freedom challenged. I had grown up and lived with the belief that I possessed great freedom, that mine was "the land of the free," where every man could carry on according to his wish. I had the freedom of farm life in Minnesota, the freedom to choose the occupation I wanted to follow, and then the freedom to fly over the world as man had never flown over it before. Of course I had no opportunity to take part in cattle raids or raids to capture women. That would have been unrespectable, illegal, and uncivilized.

we fear anything at all. We are divided because we are asked to fight over issues that are Europe's and not ours—issues that Europe created by her own short-sightedness. We are divided because many of us do not wish to fight again for England's balance of power, or for her domination of India, Mesopotamia, or Egypt, or for the Polish Corridor, or for another treaty like Versailles. We are divided because we do not want to cross an ocean to fight on foreign continents, for foreign causes, against an entire world combined against us. Many of us do not think we can impose our way of life, at the point of a machine gun, on the peoples of Germany, Russia, Italy, France, and Japan. Many of us do not believe democracy can be spread in such a manner. We believe that we are more likely to lose it at home than to spread it abroad by prolonging this war and sending millions of our soldiers to their deaths in Europe and Asia.

"Democracy is not a quality that can be imposed by war. The attempt to do so has always met with failure. Democracy can spring only from within a nation itself, only from the hearts and minds of the people. It can be spread abroad by example, but never by force. The strength of a democracy lies in the satisfaction of its own people. Its influence lies in making others wish to copy it. If we cannot make other nations wish to copy our American system of government, we cannot force them to copy it by going to war. . . ."

missiles. I spent weeks flying over and driving through devastated countries. The great cities of Germany had been bombed into piles of rubble, under which lay the bodies of thousands of men, women, and children. Refugees lined both sides of the highways I drove along, pulling handcarts, pushing baby carriages, carrying huge bundles on their backs. Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces. Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained. In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see. In Frankfurt, the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs. At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled.

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed. Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race. This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life. I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. I considered renouncing my profession and living far away from modern technology, some place where I would be in touch with nature and the earth.

Just think of going off on one of those raiding parties and bringing back all the cattle you could steal, and a lot of squealing little Kikuyu girls for wives!"

"We have known freedom far greater than yours," a Masai told me. It disturbed me to have my freedom challenged. I had grown up and lived with the belief that I possessed great freedom, that mine was "the land of the free," where every man could carry on according to his wish. I had the freedom of farm life in Minnesota, the freedom to choose the occupation I wanted to follow, and then the freedom to fly over the world as man had never flown over it before. Of course I had no opportunity to take part in cattle raids or raids to capture women. That would have been unrespectable, illegal, and uncivilized.

we fear anything at all. We are divided because we are asked to fight over issues that are Europe's and not ours—issues that Europe created by her own short-sightedness. We are divided because many of us do not wish to fight again for England's balance of power, or for her domination of India, Mesopotamia, or Egypt, or for the Polish Corridor, or for another treaty like Versailles. We are divided because we do not want to cross an ocean to fight on foreign continents, for foreign causes, against an entire world combined against us. Many of us do not think we can impose our way of life, at the point of a machine gun, on the peoples of Germany, Russia, Italy, France, and Japan. Many of us do not believe democracy can be spread in such a manner. We believe that we are more likely to lose it at home than to spread it abroad by prolonging this war and sending millions of our soldiers to their deaths in Europe and Asia.

"Democracy is not a quality that can be imposed by war. The attempt to do so has always met with failure. Democracy can spring only from within a nation itself, only from the hearts and minds of the people. It can be spread abroad by example, but never by force. The strength of a democracy lies in the satisfaction of its own people. Its influence lies in making others wish to copy it. If we cannot make other nations wish to copy our American system of government, we cannot force them to copy it by going to war. . . ."

I never feel more keenly the separation of tourist from native life than when I stay in an "American hotel" abroad. All one finds is sterile food, sterile rooms, sterile buildings, sterile life, and it is offered to these travelers "who demand the best" for twenty or fifty or one hundred dollars a day. I would rather sleep in a flophouse with a flea. I once did that when I drove my Renault Quatre Chevaux, late at night, into an isolated village of northern Spain. Lights were on in the only hotel—men talking, drinking, singing. I was assigned a bed in an upstairs alcove, open to a hallway, at a cost equivalent to less than fifty U.S. cents. Supper, still available, was good—tough, simple, and anything but clean. The smell of a leaking old toilet permeated the entire hotel, and the blankets had gone so long unwashed that I unrolled my sleeping bag on top of them. A flea shared my sleeping bag that night, and thereafter accompanied me for several days on my trip. But there were no porters, bellboys, uniforms, air conditioners, electric [illegible] tiled fountains, or artificial plants. I saw Spain, heard Spain, smelled Spain, and tasted Spanish food.

him to discuss the psychological and psychiatric aspects of people's fantasizing "flying-saucer" sightings. I was amazed to find that he believed in their reality. I started to tell him about the negative results of U.S. Air Force investigations of hundreds of reported sightings, but he showed no interest. He asked how I accounted for a series of sightings reported by a line of observers in Europe, and for others described in the United States.

When I mentioned a discussion I had had with General Carl Spaatz, the chief of staff of the Air Force, in regard to reported flying-saucer sightings, Jung said: "There are many things taking place upon the earth that you and General Spaatz do not know about." He then cited the disintegration of a BOAC Comet, which he said had been reported hit by "an unidentified flying object," or as they keep being called, a flying saucer. He appeared to be completely uninterested in the fact that in this instance, as in two other accidents with Comet jet transports, official investigations disclosed that the disintegration was caused by fuselage rupture resulting from fatigue.

Here was one of the most eminent psychiatrists of modern times believing and repeating myths less probable that those evolved by cave men. And when one reads present-day books describing "factual observations" of "supernatural phenomena," it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that myths, superstitions, and beliefs now held by many educated persons are as fantastic, intuitive, improbable—and perceptive—as those held by primitive men for ages.

Investing in the stock market is like putting your kids in public school.

It prevents your kids/savings from "just sitting there doing nothing"...

And it's a vote of confidence in the system, if you're into that sort of thing.

There's a heated debate over the origin of onion domes in the traditional architecture of the Russian Orthodox Church. Because of their unique status in Christian architecture, there are many (even alien) claimants to their origin. /1

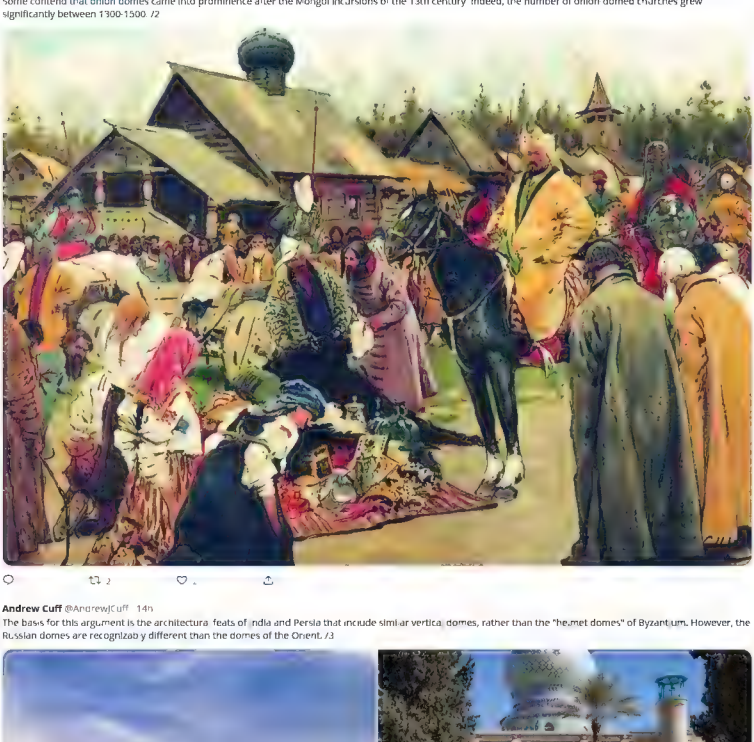
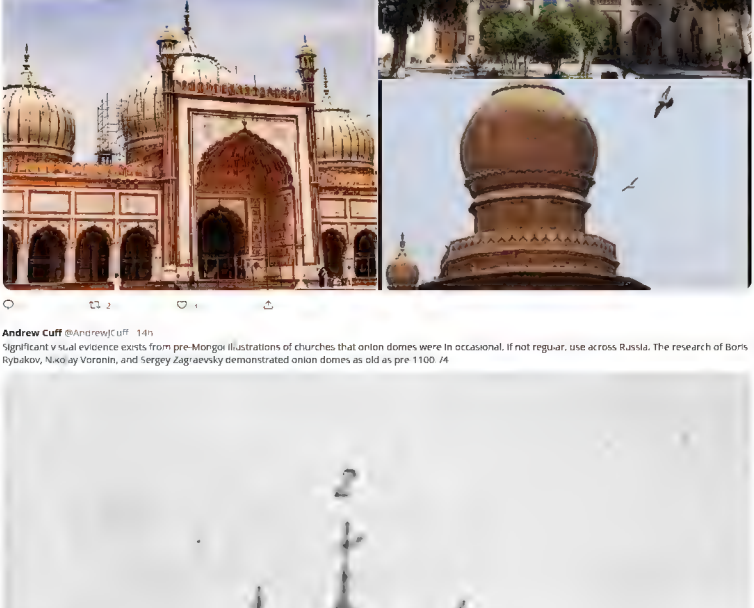
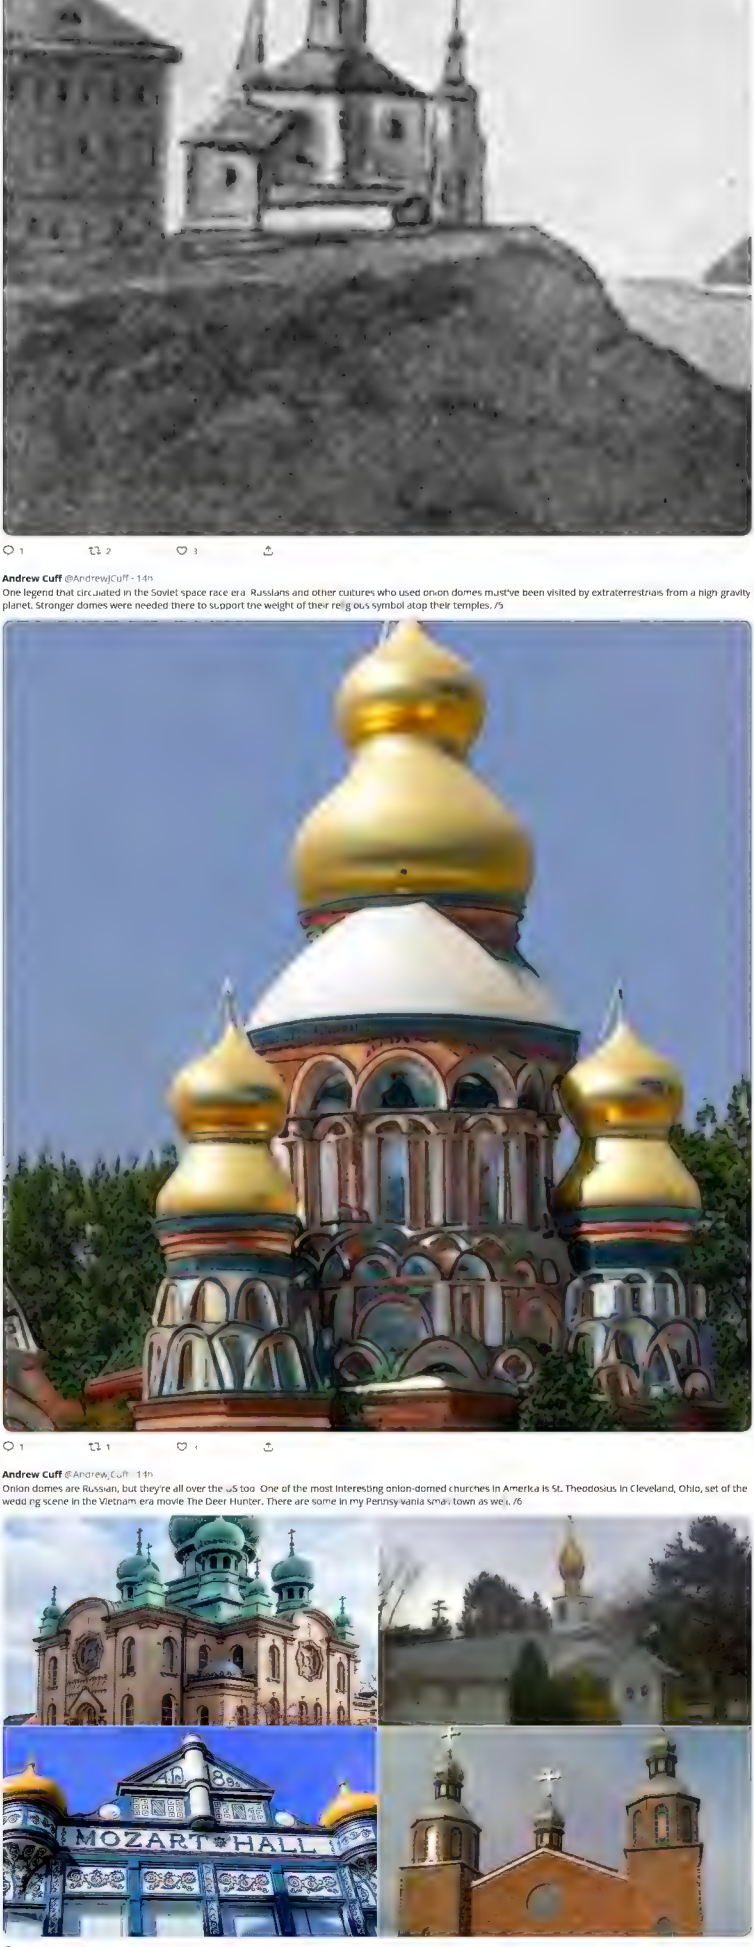
Some contend that onion domes came into prominence after the Mongol incursions of the 13th century. Indeed, the number of onion domed churches grew significantly between 1300-1500. /2



Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
The basis for this argument is the architectural feats of India and Persia that include similar vertical domes, rather than the "helmet domes" of Byzantium. However, the Russian domes are recognizably different than the domes of the Orient. /3



Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
Significant visual evidence exists from pre-Mongol illustrations of churches that onion domes were in occasional, if not regular, use across Russia. The research of Boris Rybakov, Nikolay Voronin, and Sergey Zagraevsky demonstrated onion domes as old as pre-1100. /4



Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
One legend that circulated in the Soviet space race era: Russians and other cultures who used onion domes must've been visited by extraterrestrials from a high gravity planet. Stronger domes were needed there to support the weight of their religious symbol atop their temples. /5

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
Onion domes are Russian, but they're all over the US too. One of the most interesting onion-domed churches in America is St. Theodosius in Cleveland, Ohio, set of the wedding scene in the Vietnam era movie The Deer Hunter. There are some in my Pennsylvania small town as well. /6

@M_Millerman Might be the wrong question, because good political ads don't persuade on the level of rationality (changing a planned vote).

More likely that a political ad made someone feel that a certain candidate was the next big thing. Inspired enthusiasm to vote, donate, volunteer.

Holland is completely wrong about Tolkien (and Christians') view of power here.

Tolkien was opposed to the ring's EVIL, not its POWER.

If Tolkien opposed the exercise of power, why did the elves (and Gandalf!) retain the use of their 3 rings? Why did Aragorn retain the...

Gavin Ortlund
@gavinortlund

Reading @holland_tom's Dominion tonight and this section on Tolkien is quite profound. When we succumb to using evil in order to fight against evil, we "breed new Saurons." This concern, reflected in the plot of Lord of the Rings, is so relevant to the world today. https://t.co/Fv68p9xzhu @FeserEdward Amen. For a long time, Democratic elites have taken Black voters for granted, relying on those purporting to speak for them to deliver their votes at each election, whether or not the Party, when in power, did anything to address the actual concerns of ordinary Black Americans....

in education funding, sometimes hard decisions must be made

Let me close with some sympathetic words to state college and university representatives. I have proposed to them an action program that involves some hard decisions. I would remind them of the story of the long-married husband who is summoned to the death-bed of his wife. "John", she says, "I have one final wish and I want your committment to say 'yes' before I tell you what it is."

"Yes", says John, "anything you wish dear."

"Well, when I die and the funeral home sends the limousine, I want you to invite my mother to ride with you."

There is a long pause and finally the husband says, "Very well, my love, but I want you to know that it will take all the pleasure out of it for me."

Sometimes, unpleasant decisions must be made. In the case of higher education, it is some comfort to believe that those decisions need not be made on the way to the funderal.

It's pretty incredible that @X is often called a "right wing platform" by mainstream media simply because it allows both sides of the political spectrum to talk to each other.

There's no other public space @elonmusk could have purchased that would enable free inquiry this way.

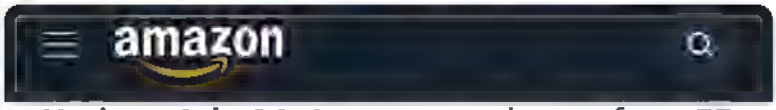
@esquire This is undeniably true. Amazon said so



Update, July 14: Amazon employees from 33 countries donated $8.5 million through the company's campaign to match donations and support organizations focused on combating systemic racism. With the company's match, that means Amazon will donate an additional $17 million to the 12 organizations and their local affiliates, which the Black Employee Network (BEN) helped select. This is in addition to Amazon's initial donation of $10M in early June. In all, these organizations have now received more than $27Mfrom the Amazon community.

Update, June 9: Since announcing our $10 million donation, we've heard many employees are making their own contributions—and we've decided to match their donations 100% up to $10,000 per employee to these 12 organizations until July 6, 2020.

But I think you've overestimated the extent to which this network is responsible for/takes advantage of the "hidden job market."

It's not that "80% of opportunities are exclusive to connected networks." It's that 80%...

Strengthen your Employer Network

Focus on the Hidden Job Market

While researching growing industries may provide some new leads, keep in mind that a very high percentage of jobs (some say up to 80%) are in the "hidden" job market – in other words, available jobs that have not yet been posted publicly. These openings are often due to changes in life circumstances, such as employees who retire, move on, or are fired. Job opportunities like these are available even during economic recessions.[6] In times when job applicants are in greater supply, employers may be less likely to invest their resources in advertising positions.[7]

Identifying jobs in the hidden job market is an effective strategy because there is less competition for positions before they are made public. The best way to find these jobs is to stay in touch with current contacts and to expand your network of new contacts—the more employers and professional contacts you talk to, the higher your chance of uncovering hidden jobs.

Those concerned about mail-in ballots causing a "blue shift" after the "red mirage" late on election night should closely observe PA's "Daily Mail Ballot Report" on the morning of November 5 (PA Dept. of State website).

There, you can personally tally the number of ballots requested and returned by voters from each party (and unaligned). The breakdown is by county, so you can compare with counties reporting their returns in real time.

Citizens can personally follow up on suspicious totals and percentages as they see them crop up on county board of election websites. If you notice 103% of mail-in requests being reported as returned in a specific county, or 99.4% of a precinct's ballots voting for one candidate, post that information on X and then call the county board of elections.

When you call the county election officials, point them to your X post link and ask them to comment on the particular discrepancy. In Pennsylvania, you need to inform the official if you are recording the phone call and receive their consent. Either way, make some record of their response and post the response on X, as it can then be introduced as evidence in a later audit.

Silver spot price broke a historic $35 today.

This is not necessarily a major warning sign, though it could be. It could also be an investment opportunity.

Most precious metals investors think silver is chronically undervalued - and call the $35 mark a "waypoint" to $50.

It's easy to purchase physical silver close to spot price at a local bullion dealer or even on Ebay. If you start small, over time you can accrue an asset that responds positively to future inflation and government spending.

Essentially, betting that the U.S. will keep printing money.

When Republicans win a landslide Trifecta in November, the Democrat infighting will begin.

Primary battle lines will be:

1) Have we become a party of single women?
2) Is "protect democracy" a good slogan?
3) We can't win every swing state which should we focus on?
4) If Republicans halt our mass immigration election strategy, is there another way we can win?
5) How can we evolve from the party of legacy mainstream media to a party that uses New Media?

Calling Trump Hitler again for the umpteenth time and thinking that's going to be your "October Surprise" is an unforced error that epitomizes her failed campaign.

Over and over, Kamala's JV campaign team has made strategic moves that show they know the playbook of running a presidential campaign, but they don't understand why the plays have worked in the past. It's beyond them.

When it comes time to execute the plays, they just get their players lined up on the field and call the snap. But nobody has any understanding of the goal or the messaging nuance. We've seen this at several points throughout her campaign:

"JD Vance is weird!"
"Tim Walz is just like you, flannel guys!"
"White Dudes for Harris!"
"I went on Fox News! Just like Trump went to NABJ!"

Many examples. Fact is, the Deep State lined up an easy win for her in this election and she, along with her amateur team, completely fumbled it.

Every battle this year has been a test of the old way vs. the new way of thinking.

Senators are used to thinking their corrupt dealings are untouchable, insulated from the wrath of the Republican base.

Let's test that assumption.

> 'They're trying to bully us': We spoke with a GOP senator who sees this as an effort to intimidate Republicans and isolate Thune and Cornyn. This senator won't vote for Scott but hasn't decided whether to support Thune or Cornyn.
> "I really don't much care what Tucker Carlson thinks. They're trying to bully us. That's not how these elections work," said the GOP senator, who was granted anonymity to give a candid assessment. "President Trump won decisively, and he deserves to have someone with actual experience who can get his agenda enacted."

@GreenPlusAnE If anyone wants to make the case for UTC on literary merits, please just read it. Even its strongest supporters in academia don't call it a masterpiece. It's written like a 2020s Netflix special.

"My master! and who made him my master? That's what I think of — what right has he to me? I'm a man as much as he is. I'm a better man than he is. I know more about business than he does; I am a better manager than he is; I can read better than he can; I can write a better hand, — and I've learned it all myself, and no thanks to him, — I've learned it in spite of him; and now what right has he to make a dray-horse of me? — to take me from things I can do, and do better than he can, and put me to work that any horse can do? He tries to do it; he says he'll bring me down and humble me, and he puts me to just the hardest, meanest, and dirtiest work on purpose!"

"Oh, George! George! you frighten me! Why, I never heard you talk so; I'm afraid you'll do something dreadful. I don't wonder at your feelings, at all; but oh, do be careful — do, do — for my sake — for Harry's!"

@L0m3z In college I was president of our philosophy club.

I implemented a rule where nobody could refer to philosophers or philosophies by name.

Instead of saying "Nietzschean" you had to say what you really meant.

Worked wonders.

respect the word

Respect for the word is the first commandment in the discipline by which a man can be educated to maturity—intellectual, emotional, and moral.

Respect for the word—to employ it with scrupulous care and an incorruptible heartfelt love of truth—is essential if there is to be any growth in a society or in the human race.

To misuse the word is to show contempt for man. It undermines the bridges and poisons the wells. It causes Man to regress down the long path of his evolution.

"But I say unto you, that every idle word that men speak. . . ."

Charles Haywood
@TheWorthyHouse

@AndrewJCuff Not really. Every location has high talent people who have no interest in moving to an "exciting" new place. At the extremes, such as SpaceX, you have to bring in people from elsewhere. Not true for the vast majority of businesses.

Too few people understand the immigration crisis in our public schools. Why is so much taxpayer money spent on language interpreters, legal documents, childcare, welfare handouts, and much more - for students who are here illegally?

The entire industry of "undocumented immigrant education" is propped up by one very dubious 5-4 court decision that misconstrued the 14th amendment.

Plyler v. Doe (1982) argued that the state of Texas had "no compelling state interest" in ensuring only citizens were allowed to receive free education in their public schools.

Overturning Plyler, which Republicans such as Gov. @GregAbbott_TX has expressed interest in challenging, would be a critical complementary plank in President Elect Trump's immigration restriction platform.

The thing is, none of those thinkers you cited would enlist Thomas as a compatibilist, and neither would any medieval whose ideas were part of the growing Catholic consensus after 1277.

Since compatibilism is the core disagreement between Catholics and Calvinists, talking about other theological terms from Calvin (like unconditional election) is just a distraction.

Josue
@caJosue0060

@AndrewJCuff @reformedtexan And finally, for this to remain in the middle ages is simply unsustainable. Eminent contemporary theologians such as Fr. Garrigou-Lagrange, Fr. Marin Sola, Fr. Royo-Marin, etc. continued to support the classic Thomist position (including physical predetermination).

In my opinion he was a compatibilist, yes. But you should further investigate the Catholic reception of Thomas after 1277. Those (like neo-Thomists) who think Thomas was correct on the will—or seek to make him a kind of synechdoche for the Catholic tradition as a whole, as in Aeterni Patris—do not accept that he was a compatibilist.

@caJosue0060 @reformedtexan Thomas' version of compatibilism, which could be called intellectual determinism, was condemned by the Catholic magisterium 3 years after his death.

157 That when two goods are proposed, the stronger moves more strongly. This is erroneous unless one is speaking from the standpoint of the good that moves.

158 That in all his actions man follows his appetite and always the greater appetite. This is erroneous if what is meant is the greater in moving power.

159 That the appetite is necessarily moved by a desirable object if all obstacles are removed. This is erroneous in the case of the intellectual appetite.

160. That it is impossible for the will not to will when it is in the disposition in which it is natural for it to be moved and when that which by nature moves remains so disposed.

qxd 21 2\ 06 2 33 AM Page 188

161 That in itself the will is undetermined to opposites, like matter, but it is determined by a desirable object as matter is determined by an agent.

162A That the science of contraries alone is the cause for which the rational soul is in potency to opposites, and that a power that is simply one is not in potency to opposites except accidentally and by reason of something else.

163A. That the will necessarily pursues what is firmly held by reason and that it cannot abstain from that which reason dictates. This necessitation, however, is not compulsion but the nature of the will.

Josue
@caJosue0060

@AndrewJCuff @reformedtexan I am not trying to do so, simply the classical Thomistic (or Bañezian) position is allowed by the Catholic magisterium, it cannot be condemned, and that position is essentially identical to the Reformed (or at least to some of the currents within of that tradition).

Somewhat off-topic since this is divine determinism, not intellectual determinism. I'm not very familiar with Maritain on this subject but as for Molina, his view is simply that God's foreknowledge is non causal and non- determination. Not is it based on the future but on counterfactuals derived from essences. This is effectively libertarian, as moral agents have aseity with respect to their acts under Molinism.

Josue
@caJosue0060

@AndrewJCuff @reformedtexan That the position of many neo-Thomists (such as Maritain) who eschew physical premotion, or many who accept libertarianism, is equally acceptable as is Molinism. All of these positions fall within the Catholic spectrum, as well as old Thomism.

Unpopular opinion: women have always been an active presence in the economy. Their homes used to be the place of industry out of necessity - understanding a mother's role in industrial transmission is grossly underestimated.

Internal News & Communications

Agencywide Update

Dear agency employees,

We are taking steps to close all agency DEIA offices and end all DEIA-related contracts in accordance with President Trump's executive orders titled Ending Radical and Wasteful Government DEI Programs and Preferencing and Initial Rescissions of Harmful Executive Orders and Actions.

These programs divided Americans by race, wasted taxpayer dollars, and resulted in unlawful discrimination.

We are aware of efforts by some in government to disguise these programs by using coded or imprecise language. If you are aware of a change in any contract description or personnel position description since November 5, 2024 to obscure the connection between the contract and DEIA or similar ideologies, please report all facts and circumstances to HQ-Admin-Chief-Strategy-Officer within 10 days.

There will be no adverse consequences for timely reporting this information. However, failure to report this information within 10 days may result in adverse consequences.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

The "Nation's Report Card" released today is a window on failure. And the buck stops with the federal government.

LATEST RELEASE

Results from the 2024 NAEP Reading and Mathematics Assessments at Grades 4 and 8

Compared to 2022:

- Average score increased in mathematics at grade 4; no significant change at grade 8.
- Average scores declined in reading at both grades.
- No significant change for most states in both subjects and grades
- Lower percentages of students absent 5 or more days in both subjects and grades.

Teddy Roosevelt's library at Sagamore Hill (1912).

As he wrote in a 1915 article on his taste in reading, Roosevelt favored books that centered on action and was well versed in classics.

"Within broad limits, therefore, the reader's personal and individual taste must be the guiding factor. I like hunting books and books of exploration and adventure. I do not ask anyone else to like them. I distinctly do not hold my own preferences as anything whatever but individual preferences; and this article is to be accepted as confessional rather than didactic. With this understanding I admit a liking for novels where something happens; and even among these novels I can neither explain nor justify why I like some and do not like others; why, among the novels of Sienkiewicz, I cannot stand "Quo Vadis," and never tire of "With Fire and Sword," "Pan Michael," the "Deluge" and the "Knights of the Cross."

@A_Man_in_Full @ploughmansfolly It is true as a constitutional matter. Plyler did not endorse the concept of education as a positive right. Also, we are likely to see that case overturned as the Plyler test of a "compelling state interest" has certainly borne out in 2025.

Good on Cambria County (Johnstown, PA) commissioners for following up and addressing the voting machine issues on Election Day 2024.

Just because we won, does NOT mean election integrity is no longer an issue. Accountability for all the fraud concerns is critical.

Both states and the @FEC (and hopefully, Congress) need to take whatever steps are necessary to ensure rigged elections become a thing of the past.

J6 Feds now pleading for amnesty in open letters because they are PTA members and play golf.

Sorry, but being an upper middle class suburbanite is not a magic replacement for accountability.

Uncommon Sense was a Common Vice

Those with knowledge of the United States Marine Corps will recognize the irony of this title. I wish its words were not true, but as I write this, I believe they are. Currently, there is an effort to cull a significant number of career Special Agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This is an unthinkable action that will gravely undermine the security of the nation well beyond what many of our citizens are aware. For those seeking to raise their awareness, I offer this vignette free of political bias or moral judgment. It is not about any one person, but an amalgamation of multiple FBI Special Agents.

I am the coach of your child's soccer team. I sit next to you on occasion in religious devotion. I am a member of the PTA. With friends, you celebrated my birthday. I collected your mail and took out your trash while you were away from home. I played a round of golf with you. I am a veteran. I am the average neighbor in your community. This is who you see and know. However, there is a part of my life that is a mystery to you, and prompts a natural curiosity about my profession.

This is the quiet side of me that you do not know. I orchestrated a clandestine operation to secure the release of an allied soldier held captive by the Taliban. I prevented an ISIS terrorist from boarding a commercial aircraft. I spent 3 months listening to phone intercepts in real time to gather evidence needed to dismantle a violent drug gang. I recruited a source to provide critical intelligence on Russian military activities in Africa. I rescued a citizen being tortured to near death by members of an Outlaw Motorcycle Gang. I interceded and stopped a juvenile planning to conduct a school shooting. I spent multiple years monitoring the activities of deep cover foreign intelligence officers, leading to their arrest and deportation. I endured extensive hardship to infiltrate a global child trafficking organization. I have been shot in the line of duty.

Something else about me, I was assigned to investigate a potential crime. Like all previous cases I have investigated, this one met every legal standard of predication and procedure. Without bias, I upheld my oath to this country and the Constitution and collected the facts. I collected the facts in a manner to neither prove innocence nor guilt, but to arrive at resolution.

I am now sitting in my home, listening to my children play and laugh in the backyard, oblivious to the prospect that their father may be fired in a few days. Fired for conducting a legally authorized investigation. Fired for doing the job that he was hired to do. I have to wonder, when I am gone, who will do the quiet work that is behind the facade of your average neighbor?

The opening chapters of Postman's book Amusing Ourselves to Death cover the incredible literate prowess of even the peasantry of America - ability to memorize hour long speeches, solve complex "ciphers" (logic puzzles) in childhood, etc.

Think young Abe Lincoln. A mix of print and oral culture.

Yankee literacy is a double-edged sword that produces clerisy and heresy. But you can't deny it's impressive, and uniquely so.

Guys ... James Burnham is helping Elon dismantle the Administrative State.

James Burnham, 41

General Counsel

Connected to: Executive Office of the President

Burnham is a former litigation partner at Jones Day and a high-ranking Justice Department and White House official from the first Trump administration. The New York Times first reported his involvement with DOGE as a lawyer in January. His title at DOGE is listed internally as general counsel, according to records reviewed by ProPublica. Burnham previously served as a clerk to Supreme Court Justice Neil Gorsuch. On a website for one of his past companies, Burnham is described as having played a "central role" in the selection and confirmation processes for Gorsuch, Justice Brett Kavanaugh and then-Judge Amy Coney Barrett.

As we work to reform the corrupt college system by demanding gainful employment and accountability for taxpayer money, you're going to see a lot more sanctimonious takes like this one protesting that "higher education is about more than getting a job! It's about educating the wHoLe PeRSoN"

In the abstract, this is correct. College should be about more than securing employment. But we entrusted our colleges with the duty of forming well-rounded citizens, and they used that trust to indoctrinate students with gay race communism.

Taxpayers are not going to fund that nonsense anymore. Not only will student loans for fake degrees not be "forgiven," subprime college debt won't even be approved in the first place.

So now the sociology professors get to fight it out in the shark tank with the engineers. They brought this on themselves. Perhaps one day, when the subversion has been purged out of higher education, we can start fresh.

Opinion: The true purpose of higher education

I think this is an artifact of a different time in education, when the classroom was only full of those who wanted to be there (or whose parents would provide work ethic incentives).

Today, we prize the "conversion" of students through "gateway drug" learning - in the hope they eventually tackle the challenging parts.

How many of us ultimately learned Latin because we played a real time strategy game? Our Parthenon.

"The trouble with these boys," said a grim old classical scholar looking up from some milk-and-watery entrance papers which he had been marking: "the trouble with these boys is that the masters have been talking to them about the Parthenon when they should have been talking to them about the Optative." [The "Optative" is one of the moods of the Greek verb.]…. Ever since then I have tended to use the Parthenon and the Optative as the symbols of two types of education. The one begins with hard, dry things like grammar, and dates, and prosody; and it has at least the chance of ending in a real appreciation which is equally hard and firm though not equally dry. The other begins in "Appreciation" and ends in gush. When the first fails it has, at the very least, taught the boy what knowledge is like. He may decide that he doesn't care for knowledge; but he knows he doesn't care for it, and he knows he hasn't got it. But the other fails most disastrously when it most succeeds. It teaches a man to feel vaguely cultured while he remains in fact a dunce. It makes him think he is enjoying poems he can't construe. It qualifies him to review books he does not understand, and to be intellectual without intellect. It plays havoc with the very distinction between truth and error.

The negotiation didn't break down because Zelensky "made a mistake" and used the wrong tone with Trump.

It's because wasting $350 billion on Ukraine was never America First. Nor was enabling Zelensky's delusion.

To survive, Ukraine leadership must learn to live in reality.

Jessica Riedl, Manhattan Institute:

At this point, the $2 billion in savings identified by Elon Musk would pay for 1/75th of 1 percent of the entire national debt. I have not found any legitimate evidence of fraud in the spending that Elon Musk has highlighted. I have found expenditures that a lot of people wish the government wouldn't engage in, such as DEI contracts and Politico subscriptions.

But that doesn't make them fraudulent. It just makes them policies that certain people would not like us to be spending money on.

> Welcome to GloatFest: Trump is hardly shy about bigging himself up at the best of times, and given the extraordinary success — on his own terms, reply-guys — of his 42 days back in office, you just know there's a long list coming tonight. Illegal border crossings are down dramatically; USAID has essentially been shuttered; NATO partners are scrambling to increase their defense spending; and the national conversation around DEI efforts has been transformed. Some of the most contentious Cabinet picks in U.S. history have sailed into office. Protectionism is back in a major way. Without question, America has been changed.

Our warning should have been that she does this three names thing. Amy Coney Barret is trying to model herself after Sandra Day O'Connor and Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

JUSTICE ALITO, with whom JUSTICE THOMAS, JUSTICE GORSUCH, and JUSTICE KAVANAUGH join, dissenting from the denial of the application to vacate order

Does a single district-court judge who likely lacks jurisdiction have the unchecked power to compel the Government of the United States to pay out (and probably lose forever) 2 billion taxpayer dollars? The answer to that question should be an emphatic "No," but a majority of this Court apparently thinks otherwise. I am stunned.

I

In capsule form, this is what happened. Respondents are a group of American businesses and nonprofits that receive foreign-assistance funds from the State Department and the U. S. Agency for International Development. They brought suit and claimed that the current administration's temporary pause of foreign-assistance payments is unlawful. On February 13, 2025, the District Court issued a temporary restraining order (TRO) requiring the Government to halt its funding pause. It based that decision on a finding that respondents are likely to succeed in showing that the Government violated the Administrative Procedure Act (APA). After issuing the TRO, the District Judge grew frustrated with the pace at which funds were being disbursed, and on February 25, he issued a second order requiring the Government to pay out approximately $2 billion. The judge brushed aside the Government's argument that sovereign immunity barred this enforcement order, and he took two steps that, unless corrected, would prevent any higher court from reviewing and possibly stopping the payments. First, he labeled the order as a non-appealable TRO, and second, he demanded that the money be paid within 36 hours.

This left the Government little time to try to obtain some

The WHITE HOUSE

Sec. 2. Restoring Public Service Loan Forgiveness. The Secretary of Education shall propose revisions to 34 C.F.R. 685.219, Public Service Loan Forgiveness Program, in coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury as appropriate, that ensure the definition of "public service" excludes organizations that engage in activities that have a substantial illegal purpose, including.

(a) aiding or abetting violations of 8 U.S.C. 1325 or other Federal immigration laws;

(b) supporting terrorism, including by facilitating funding to, or the operations of, cartels designated as Foreign Terrorist Organizations consistent with 8 U.S.C. 1189, or by engaging in violence for the purpose of obstructing or influencing Federal Government policy;

(c) child abuse, including the chemical and surgical castration or mutilation of children or the trafficking of children to so-called transgender sanctuary States for purposes of emancipation from their lawful parents, in violation of applicable law;

(d) engaging in a pattern of aiding and abetting illegal discrimination; or

(e) engaging in a pattern of violating State tort laws, including laws against trespassing, disorderly conduct, public nuisance, vandalism, and obstruction of highways.

When people today talk about "human rights" what they mean is moral rights/wrongs (as distinct from positive legal rights).

When legal rights depart from moral rights, the regime is seen as immoral.

The mistake isn't believing in moral/immoral regimes, but overextending the scope of moral rights into ever-more specific areas that are the realm of prudence and tradeoffs, not absolutes.

It is not wrong in an absolute sense to imprison, inconvenience, or cause suffering to a criminal.

Michael Millerman

MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: Ramparts: John Garrett UNDERHILL Jr., Samuel George CUMMINGS, and INTERARMCO

1. Ramparts of June 1967, Vol. 5, No. 12, pp. 28-29, contains the following passages about Subjects:

"The day after the assassination, Gary Underhill left Washington in a hurry. Late in the evening he showed up at the home of friends in New Jersey. He was very agitated. A small clique within the CIA was responsible for the assassination, he confided, and he was afraid for his life and probably would have to leave the country. Less than six months later Underhill was found shot to death in his Washington apartment. The coroner ruled it suicide.

"J. Garrett Underhill had been an intelligence agent during World War II and was a recognized authority on limited warfare and small arms. A researcher and writer on military affairs, he was on a first-name basis with many of the top brass in the Pentagon. He was also on intimate terms with a number of high-ranking CIA officials--he was one of the Agency's 'un-people' who perform special assignments. At one time he had been a friend of Samuel Cummings of Interarmco, the arms broker that numbers among its customers the CIA and, ironically, Klein's Sporting Goods of Chicago, from whence /sic/ the mail-order Carcano allegedly was purchased by Oswald.

RT @charliekirk11: ??BREAKING: Education Secretary Linda McMahon has just formally WARNED California Governor Gavin Newsom to comply with f

THE SECRETARY OF EDUCATION
WASHINGTON, DC 20202

March 27, 2025

The Honorable Gavin Newsom
Governor of California
1021 O Street, Suite 9000
Sacramento, CA 95814

Dear Governor Newsom:

Your recent comments about male athletes playing in women's sports—that it is "deeply unfair"—came to the attention of my office this week. I am writing on behalf of the U.S. Department of Education to request a clarification on your stance as Governor of California, and to inquire as to your intention to encourage California public schools to comply with federal law on this issue.

An overwhelming majority of Americans agree with you that biological men in women's sports is unfair and wrong. Many are confused, however, by your office's silence on the harms of substituting "gender identity" for sex in other areas of the school environment. After all, if men "identifying as women" shouldn't play women's sports, why do California schools continue to let boys "identifying as girls" use girls' bathrooms and locker rooms, and sleep in girls-only overnight accommodations? Parents would appreciate your leadership directing schools to restore sex-based categories in all education programs and activities. School personnel have no business promoting the false notion that kids can choose or change their sex. If a child does exhibit this behavior, the school has a duty to notify parents.

Take a stand on your convictions. Be clear about the harms of gender confusion. Protect female spaces. Do not encourage children to seek permanent medical interventions to their sex. Inform parents.

Wouldn't you, as a parent, appreciate knowing that your 5th grade daughter on a school trip might have to sleep overnight in rooms with boys and men "identifying" as girls and women? A great place to start protecting girls in California K-12 schools is to repeal Cal. Ed. Code 221.5(f) by calling on your legislature to pass AB 1444. This would make it clear that California schools operate within reality and common sense. Sex-specific school programs and activities should be separated on the basis of sex, not the subjective feeling of "gender identity."

Allowing participation in sex-separated activities based on "gender identity" places schools at risk of Title IX violations and loss of federal funding. As Governor, you have a duty to inform California school districts of this risk.

You also have a duty to inform California educators and school officials that the creation of so-called "gender plans" that are kept secret from parents is against federal law. If a student claims a "gender identity" at school, managing this issue bureaucratically while hiding it from parents violates the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). More importantly, it undermines the parent-child relationship and deprives parents of involvement in a critical aspect of their child's youthful development. This is morally wrong, and as a parent, you should be naturally appalled, as I am, by the attempt to cut parents out of their children's lives.

Will you commit to working with the legislature to reverse the law you signed banning schools from notifying parents about students' gender identity?

Ultimately, this comes down to parents' fundamental rights to raise their own children. When we entrust our children to a school, we want to know that the school is committed to educating them on critical subjects, not exposing them to books and classroom discussions that suggest they can choose or change their sex. It isn't prejudicial or bigoted to expect teachers to acknowledge the reality of sex and help youngsters understand that no one is born in the wrong body.

As Secretary of Education, I am officially asking you to inform this Department whether you will remind schools in California to comply with federal law by protecting sex-separated spaces and activities. I am also officially asking you to publicly assure parents that California teachers will not facilitate the fantasy of "gender transitions" for their children. By doing so, you can ensure that schools will not continue to harm students by facilitating the false belief that sex is mutable and dependent on inner feelings or stereotypes. California's education system should not be a vehicle for extreme ideologies, but should refocus on its educational mission.

I thank you for your kind attention to this matter. I will await your prompt response regarding your intention to address it.

Sincerely,

Linda E. McMahon

Another concern for food companies is that the so-called Make America Healthy Again, or MAHA movement, could begin influencing low-income consumers' eating habits as well. While Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr.'s call for the removal of artificial dyes from the food supply likely won't pose a significant financial challenge—many companies have already eliminated these additives in their European products and could easily do the same here. The real threat lies in MAHA's potential to reshape Americans' overall perceptions of food.

Many still try to pretend SCOTUS is coldly objective, not subject to political opinion.

But the Dissent in this case lays bare the subjective nature of our most pressing legal questions.

All 4 justices based their dissent on subjective reasoning:
- "it isn't an invasion"
- "this was too much punishment"
- "deportation can't be remedied"
Etc.

Only political WILL can fix this country. Not clever legal arguments.

SOTOMAYOR, J., dissenting

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 24A931

DONALD J. TRUMP, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, ET AL. v. J. G. G., ET AL.

ON APPLICATION TO VACATE THE ORDERS ISSUED BY THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

[April 7, 2025]

JUSTICE SOTOMAYOR, with whom JUSTICE KAGAN and JUSTICE JACKSON join, and with whom JUSTICE BARRETT joins as to Parts II and III–B, dissenting.

Three weeks ago, the Federal Government started sending scores of Venezuelan immigrants detained in the United States to a foreign prison in El Salvador. It did so without any due process of law, under the auspices of the Alien Enemies Act, a 1798 law designed for times of war. Between the start of these removals and now, a District Court has been expeditiously considering the legal claims of a group of detainees (hereafter plaintiffs), who allege that their summary removal violates the Constitution and multiple statutes. The District Court ordered a pause on plaintiffs' removals until it could consider their motion for a preliminary injunction at a hearing tomorrow, on April 8. Still, a majority of the Court sees fit to speak to this issue today.

Critically, even the majority today agrees, and the Federal Government now admits, that individuals subject to removal under the Alien Enemies Act are entitled to adequate notice and judicial review before they can be removed. That should have been the end of the matter. Yet, with "barebones briefing, no argument, and scarce time for reflection," Department of Education v. California, 604 U. S. ___, ___

The human will to dominate (appetitive soul) will not protect us from automation taking away our humanity.

Machines can easily simulate libido dominandi - in fact, this is probably one of the easiest things for them to do. And using them in this way won't protect your soul.

Which is better for the soul? A war of swords or a war of drones? Which is more efficient and automated?

What sets humans apart is nothing natural to us; it's the reality of the supernatural, including the divine moral universe, and our access to it.

Our "unique" ability to dominate will get us as far as our ability to eat, in the contest with the machines. Contest and consumption are not the essence of our humanity.

Importance of this move can't be overstated.

We are facing tremendous challenges across the globe. To deliver on President Trump's America First foreign policy, we must make the State Department Great Again.

In its current form, the Department is bloated, bureaucratic, and unable to perform its essential diplomatic mission in this new era of great power competition. Over the past 15 years, the Department's footprint has had unprecedented growth and costs have soared. But far from seeing a return on investment, taxpayers have seen less effective and efficient diplomacy. The sprawling bureaucracy created a system more beholden to radical political ideology than advancing America's core national interests.

Secretary Marco Rubio
@SecRubio

Today is the day. Under @POTUS' leadership and at my direction, we are reversing decades of bloat and bureaucracy at the State Department.

These sweeping changes will empower our talented diplomats to put America and Americans first.
